opportunities and constraints for biofuel development in sub-Saharan Africa Graham von Maltitz, William Stafford, 2011-08-24 Sustainable biofuel production should provide opportunities for sub-Saharan African countries and their inhabitants especially in impoverished rural areas Biofuel feedstock production has the potential to bring job opportunities and earnings but this should not be at the cost of existing livelihoods and the local environment Biofuels also have the potential to increase energy security in these countries for both transportation and household needs Sub-Saharan African biofuel feedstock production projects can be classified into 4 distinct models based on production scales small versus large scale farm plantations and on the intended use of the biofuel local versus national The first type embraces large corporate plantations to supply the market for liquid transport fuel blends The second type comprises small scale producers linked to the corporate producers The third type involves small scale producers supplying the local energy needs of farmers and villages The fourth and rarest type is linked to the large corporate plantations to meet the corporation s own energy needs The introduction of foreign owned large scale corporate plantations producing biofuel for transport fuel blends causes the most concern in sub Saharan Africa as their scale and ownership arrangements may disrupt rural livelihoods and affect access rights to land resources However these projects can also bring job opportunities thereby providing alternative sources of income for poor communities This working paper assesses mechanisms for limiting the negative impacts while maximising national benefit capture Market based mechanisms versus legal and policy mechanisms to enhance long term sustainability are also discussed

The Great Curse R. Albert Berry,2024 Land is the key input for economies in the earliest stages of development when seventy five percent to ninety percent of the labor force is engaged in agriculture Concentration of land ownership has been a common and usually quite damaging feature of most societies throughout history as both the cause and the result of access to power Highly unequal control of land typically implies severe inequality of income and welfare as well Landlessness has been at the root of many of the world's most serious and persistent problems including severe exploitation and the deprivation of political rights and basic human needs. Historically, the motivation for many revolutions has been access to land. This volume reviews the land reform experiences of multiple countries during the twentieth century. The experiences covered illustrate the widespread need for reform, the great difficulties facing major changes, and the extreme cost of failure in delicate political moments. Looking ahead, the biggest challenge will be to avoid the injustices and inequality that have accompanied land concentration in the past.
