The Conscience Of The World The Influence Of Non Governmental Organizations In The Un System:

The Conscience of the World Peter Willetts, 2002-04-26 Private groups such as Amnesty International and Save the Children Fund have had a formal consultative status with the United Nations since its founding. Such groups known as nongovernmental organizations or NGOs have come to exert considerable influence on the UN's agenda setting, decisionmaking and policy implementation. This book examines the role of the NGOs in world politics and the accomplishments of selected groups dealing with the environment, women's rights, children's problems, human rights and refugee and famine crises. Although these organizations and the UN generally act as partners and collaborators, there are also some tensions as the NGOs do not have voting status and must remain independent and innovative. In the area of human rights, in particular, the NGOs have applied slow but steady pressure to force the UN to institute real sanctions against individual governments, thus earning the title 'conscience of the world'. Contributors are Seamus Cleary (formerly at the Catholic Fund for Overseas Development), Jane Connors (senior lecturer in law at London University and specialist in women's rights), Helena Cook (former legal officer of Amnesty International), Richard Hoggart (former assistant director general of UNESCO), Michael Longford (UK representative to several international groups), Sally Morphet (UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office), Angela Penrose (Save the Children Fund), John Sankey (former UK representative to the UN in Geneva), John Seaman (Save the Children Fund), Bill Seary (formerly at the National Council for Voluntary Organizations), Henry Steel (leader of the UK delegation to the UN Human Rights Commission) and Douglas Williams (former deputy secretary of the UK Ministry of Overseas Development). Copublished with the David Davies Memorial Institute of International Studies. Available through Brookings in North America only.

Non-Governmental Organisations and the United Nations Human Rights System

Fiona McGaughey, 2021-05-30 Non-governmental Organisations (NGOs) have become important, although sometimes overlooked, actors in international human rights law. Although NGOs are not generally provided for in the 'hard law' of treaties, they use the UN human rights system to hold Governments to account. A key way in which they do so is using State reporting mechanisms: initially the UN treaty bodies, but more recently supplemented by the Human Rights Council's Universal Periodic Review. In doing so, NGOs provide information and contribute to developing recommendations. NGOs also lobby for new treaties, contribute to the drafting of these treaties and bring individual's complaints to the UN human rights bodies. This book charts the historical development of the NGO role in the UN. It examines the UN regulation of NGOs, but the largely informal nature of the role and an exploration of the various types of NGOs, including some less benign actors such as GONGOs (Governmental NGOs). It also draws on empirical data to illustrate NGO influence on UN human rights bodies and gives voice to stakeholders both inside and outside the UN. The book concludes that the current UN human rights system is heavily reliant on NGOs and that they play an essential fact-finding role and contribute to global democratisation and governance.

Non-Governmental Organizations in World Politics Peter Willetts, 2010-12-15 Non-governmental organizations NGOs from Amnesty International and Oxfam to Greenpeace and Save the Children are now key players in global politics This accessible and informative textbook provides a comprehensive overview of the significant role and increasing participation of NGOs in world politics Peter Willetts examines the variety of different NGOs their structure membership and activities and their complex relationship with social movements and civil society He makes us aware that there are many more NGOs exercising influence in the United Nations system than the few famous ones Conventional thinking is challenged in a radical manner on four questions the extent of the engagement of NGOs in global policy making the status of NGOs within international law the role of NGOs as crucial pioneers in the creation of the Internet and the need to integrate NGOs within mainstream international relations theory This is the definitive guide to this crucial area within international politics and should be required reading for students NGO activists and policy makers

NGO's and the United Nations K. Martens, 2005-11-10 NGOs and the United Nations reveals how NGOs have changed their interaction with the UN since the mid 1990s It also looks at how their representation to the UN their consultative status and their characteristic features influence their relationship with the UN The case studies include some of the most renowned players on the international scene such as Amnesty International Human Rights Watch CARE International and Oxfam International

Non-Governmental Organisations in International Law Anna-Karin Lindblom, 2005 Even when governments have no democratic basis they are regarded as the sole representatives of their populations on the international plane and take important decisions on their behalf It is therefore important that other voices can be heard in international fora alongside governments NGOs have an increasingly important legal and political role and use several different avenues for their work such as lodging cases before international courts and other bodies and participating in international meetings and conferences This book explores these possibilities for the participation of NGOs in international law

Routledge Handbook of NGOs and International Relations Thomas Davies, 2019-04-09 Offering insights from pioneering new perspectives in addition to well established traditions of research this Handbook considers the activities not only of advocacy groups in the environmental feminist human rights humanitarian and peace sectors but also the array of religious professional and business associations that make up the wider non governmental organization NGO community Including perspectives from multiple world regions the book takes account of institutions in the Global South alongside better known structures of the Global North International contributors from a range of disciplines cover all the major aspects of research into NGOs in International Relations to present a comprehensive overview of the historical evolution of NGOs the range of structural forms and international networks coverage of major theoretical perspectives illustrations of how NGOs are influential in every prominent issue area of contemporary International Relations evaluation of the significant regional variations among NGOs and how regional contexts influence the nature and impact of NGOs analysis of the ways NGOs address authoritarianism terrorism and challenges to democracy and how NGOs handle concerns surrounding their own
