The Impact Of Industrialization On An Urban Labor Market:

The Impact of Industrialization on an Urban Labor Market Ed Duggan, 1972 The Impact of Industrialization on an Urban Labor Market Edward Patrick Duggan, 1982 The Africanization of the Labor Market Remi Clignet, 2023-07-28 This book offers a detailed analysis of the labor market segmentation in Cameroon examining the social educational and occupational divides that influence labor market access and mobility The author s primary focus is on how these divisions rooted in colonial history and ethnic fragmentation shape the participation of different groups within the modern industrial workforce Cameroon s rapid urbanization high population growth and limited agricultural productivity have driven a migration of workers into urban centers thereby expanding both industrial and service sectors The study highlights the late development phenomenon in Cameroon where educational advancement preceded the rise of large scale industry creating a labor force often more educated than the jobs available and sparking shifts in hiring and promotion policies The research addresses the differential treatment of manual and non manual workers arguing that the former face more barriers tied to ethnic and residential backgrounds while the latter benefit from educational achievements that help transcend these limitations This educational advantage allows non manual workers particularly those in white collar roles greater mobility and access to higher paying positions Chapter by chapter the author explores how firm specific factors such as size age and legal status affect employment practices and ultimately wage disparities The study identifies employer strategies that segment the labor market noting that while some firms adopt more universalistic policies others continue discriminatory practices based on social or regional biases In conclusion the book situates Cameroon s experience within broader theories of industrialization and development weighing gradualist strategies which emphasize incremental change and agricultural support against transformative strategies focused on rapid industrial growth The study underscores the challenges of Africanization policies and the pressures on Cameroonian employers and policymakers to balance educational expansion with meaningful industrial and occupational opportunities This work provides insight into the broader implications of late development for African labor markets and the struggle to create equitable achievement based occupational hierarchies in post colonial settings This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1976 The Organization Of Work In Rural And Urban Labor Markets Patrick M Horan, Charles M Tolbert, 1984-11-21 Economic analysis of local level rural areas and urban areas labour markets in South Eastern USA examines the social structure and economic structure reviews labour market related economic theories and economic research as well as its classification looks at theoretical economic models and analysis design analyses occupational and income allocation labour market types and the social division of labour discusses further research needs

Graphs references statistical tables Research and Development Projects United States. Employment and Training Administration,1980 Wage Inequality from Agricultural Modernization Dianshuang Wang,2025-06-14 This book integrates the agricultural producer service sector into a three sector general equilibrium framework to examine the modernization of small scale agriculture in developing economies By incorporating agricultural transformation and rural urban migration dynamics it presents a theoretical analysis of the determinants of wage inequality between skilled and unskilled labor from multiple perspectives Over the past few decades industrialization and urbanization have progressed in parallel driving the modernization of the agricultural sector Traditional development economics often conceptualizes agricultural modernization within the context of large scale operations assuming that traditional agriculture can directly adopt modern non agricultural intermediate inputs after some transformations However small scale agriculture the dominant form in developing countries follows a distinct modernization path This divergence manifests in two key ways First labor substitution and migration The introduction of modern intermediate non agricultural inputs tends to displace agricultural labor accelerating rural urban migration Second the role of the agricultural producer service sector Due to the prevalence of small scale operations an intermediary sector the agricultural producer service sector emerges to facilitate the modernization process These differences significantly influence intersectoral labor allocation and wage inequality Given that agricultural modernization policy shifts and socioeconomic changes concurrently affect labor allocation it is crucial to analyze how these exogenous factors shape wage disparities in the presence of agricultural transformation To model this process the book establishes a two layer vertical production structure non agricultural goods are partially utilized by the agricultural producer service sector which then produces intermediate inputs that substitute for agricultural labor The study focuses on three major factors that profoundly impact rural labor migration and wage inequality pro rural policies mitigation labor market distortion raising rural public infrastructure increased agricultural subsidies FDI and internal remittances and technological progress green technological progress and skill biased technical change The findings offer novel insights into wage inequality in developing economies and provide a theoretical foundation for formulating development policies
