Aboriginal Studies Robert Tonks, Ronald Berndt, 1988-11 This volume summaries major developments in the social anthropology of Aboriginal studies in the 1960s 80s It is valuable as an overview of five important and interrelated topics economy kinship gender religion and law It also contains stimulating comment and criticism and raised important issues for future research as well as current debate in Aboriginal studies Aboriginal Australia Colin Bourke, Eleanor Bourke, William Howell Edwards, 1998 With an analysis of the traditional colonial and contemporary experiences of indigenous Australians this study examines various facets of the lives of Aboriginal Australians and shows how their struggles enrich the Australian community as a whole Insightful and engaging this reference presents an investigation on the continual struggle facing Aborigines to maintain a strong identity and heritage while actively participating in and contributing to the modern world

The Aboriginal Component in the Australian Economy, 1981 Earth Matters Ciaran O'Faircheallaigh, Saleem Ali, 2017-09-08 Indigenous peoples have historically gained little from large scale resource development on their traditional lands and have suffered from its negative impacts on their cultures economies and societies During recent decades indigenous groups and their allies have fought hard to change this situation in some cases by opposing development entirely in many others by seeking a fundamental change in the distribution of benefits and costs from resource exploitation In doing so they have utilised a range of approaches including efforts to win greater recognition of indigenous rights in international fora pressure for passage of national and state or provincial legislation recognising indigenous land rights and protecting indigenous culture litigation in national and international courts and direct political action aimed at governments and developers often in alliance with non governmental organisations NGOs At the same time and partly in response to these initiatives many of the corporations that undertake large scale resource exploitation have sought to address concerns regarding the impact of their activities on indigenous peoples by adopting what are generally referred to as corporate social responsibility CSR policies This book focuses on such corporate initiatives It does not treat them in isolation recognising that their adoption and impact is contextual and is related both to the wider social and political framework in which they occur and to the activities and initiatives of indigenous peoples It does not treat them uncritically recognising that they may in some cases consist of little more than exercises in public relations However neither does it approach them cynically recognising the possibility that even if CSR policies and activities reflect hard headed business decisions and indeed perhaps particularly if they do so they can generate significant benefits for indigenous peoples if appropriate accountability mechanisms are in place In undertaking an in depth analysis of CSR and indigenous peoples in the extractive industries the book seeks to answer the following questions What is the nature and extent of CSR initiatives in the extractive industries and how should they be understood What motivates companies to pursue CSR policies and activities How do specific political social and legal contexts shape corporate behaviour What is the relationship between indigenous political action and CSR How and to what extent can corporations be held accountable for their policies and actions Can CSR help bring about a fundamental change in the distribution of benefits and costs from large scale resource exploitation and if so under what conditions can this occur Earth Matters gathers key experts from around the world who discuss corporate initiatives in Alaska Ecuador Australia Canada Peru Papua New Guinea Indonesia and Russia The book explores the great diversity that characterises initiatives and policies under the name of corporate social responsibility the highly contingent and contextual nature of corporate responses to indigenous demands and the complex and evolving nature of indigenous corporate relations It also reveals much about the conditions under which CSR can contribute to a redistribution of benefits and costs from large scale resource development Earth Matters will be essential reading for those working in and studying the extractive industry worldwide as well as those readers looking for a state of the art description of how CSR is functioning in perhaps its most difficult setting researchers in the field of political science My Country, Mine Country Benedict Scambary, 2013-05-01 Agreements between the mining industry and Indigenous people are not creating sustainable economic futures for Indigenous people and this demands consideration of alternate forms of economic engagement in order to realise such futures Within the context of three mining agreements in north Australia this study considers Indigenous livelihood aspirations and their intersection with sustainable development agendas The three agreements are the Yandi Land Use Agreement in the Central Pilbara in Western Australia the Ranger Uranium Mine Agreement in the Kakadu region of the Northern Territory and the Gulf Communities Agreement in relation to the Century zinc mine in the southern Gulf of Carpentaria in Queensland Recent shifts in Indigenous policy in Australia seek to de emphasise the cultural behaviour or imperatives of Indigenous people in undertaking economic action in favour of a mainstream conventional approach to economic development Concepts of value identity and community are key elements in the tension between culture and economics that exists in the Indigenous policy environment Whilst significant diversity exists within the Indigenous polity Indigenous aspirations for the future typically emphasise a desire for alternate forms of economic engagement that combine elements of the mainstream economy with the maintenance and enhancement of Indigenous institutions and livelihood activities Such aspirations reflect ongoing and dynamic responses to modernity and typically concern the interrelated issues of access to and management of country the maintenance of Indigenous institutions associated with family and kin access to resources such as cash and vehicles the establishment of robust representative organisations and are integrally linked to the derivation of both symbolic and economic value of livelihood pursuits Revisionist Histories Marnie Hughes-Warrington, 2013-07-18 Revision and revisionism are generally seen as standard parts of historical practice yet they are underexplored within the growing literature on historiography In this accessibly written volume Marnie Hughes Warrington discusses this paucity of work on revision in history theory and raises ethical questions about linear models and spatial metaphors that have been used to explain it Revisionist Histories emphasises the role of the authors and audiences of histories alike as the writers and rewriters of history Through study of digital environments graphic novels and reader annotated texts this book shows that the sides of history cannot be disentangled from one another and that they are subject to flux and even destruction over time Incorporating diverse and controversial case studies including the French Revolution Holocaust Denial and European settlers contact with Native Americans and Indigenous Australians Revisionist Histories offers both a detailed account of the development of revisionism and a new more spatial vision of historiography An essential text for students of historiography Aborigines and Mining Royalties in the Northern Territory Jon C.
