Robertson, 1977-03-01 The present volume of essays is designed for those who love the Greek New Testament That number is very large and is increasing rapidly The drift back towards Greek is definite particularly among ministers In the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary for instance three hundred young ministers were enrolled during the past session in the various classes in the Greek New Testament besides those who had carried such work in previous sessions This is nearly three fourths of the total number of students and shows conclusively that Greek is not dead in this institution

Can We Recover the Original Text of the New Testament? David Alan Black, Abidan Paul Shah, 2023-10-06 In recent decades the traditional definition of the original text of the New Testament NT has shifted from seeking one singular text to seeking a number of texts Instead of one authorial text now it is claimed that it could be one of several different texts based on their locations in the history of transmission preauthorial authorial canonical and postcanonical These distinctions were first listed by Eldon Epp in his article The Multivalence of the Term Original Text in New Testament Textual Criticism as predecessor autographic canonical and interpretive text forms It is apparent that with such changing definitions of the original text of the NT text critics are ambivalent regarding reaching the traditional goal of NT textual criticism Instead attention is now given towards hypothesizing regarding the emergence of the variant readings Furthermore any attempt towards utilizing text critical principles to reach the original text is looked upon as being out of date and pointless All such shifting definitions of the original text and the ensuing claims have far reaching consequences for biblical faith and praxis In this work three different scholars will present their methodologies for retrieving the original text of the NT No matter how each of the presenters evaluates the text critical evidence it is obvious that they all believe in the inerrancy and retrievability of the NT text
