The Individual And His Religion A Psychological Interpretation:

The Individual and His Religion Gordon Willard Allport, 1960 A man's religion is the audacious bid he makes to bind himself to creation and to the Creator. It is his ultimate attempt to enlarge and to complete his own personality by finding the supreme context in which he rightly belongs. In these pages I have undertaken the task of discovering the place of religion in the life economy of the individual of seeking a psychological understanding of the nature and functioning of the religious sentiment and tracing the full course of religious development in the normally mature and productive personality. The Individual and His Religion Gordon Willard Allport, 1956 The Individual and His Religion Gordon Willard Allport, 1976

Crapps, 1986 Developed in almost thirty years of classroom experience this book is designed to introduce students and other readers to the psychological study of religion. Robert W. Crapps deals with the major questions and figures that have dominated the psychological study of religion over the past century dividing the discussion into four parts. Two chapters in part one suggest the problems and possibilities for the psychological study of religion in light of the nature of religion and the scientific method. Part two sketches the contributions to the study of religion of three intellectual currents in contemporary psychology: psychoanalysis, behaviorism, and humanistic psychology. Part three explores the relationship between religion and human development while part four directs attention to religious lifestyles and that weave differentiated parts of human experience into a cohesive whole.
