

them that he had pardoned Danby and "I will give it him ten times over, rather than it should not be full and sufficient for the purpose I design it."<sup>24</sup>

Howard's position was difficult: he wanted to do the greatest possible harm to Danby (perhaps from a sincere conviction of his guilt), with the least possible offense to the King. He therefore delivered a long and roundabout speech, contrasting the days of the Civil War when it was easy to distinguish between the King's friends and enemies (his friends being "in dungeons and prisons") with the present time when men did ill and blamed the King for it, and continuing: If we well know the Revenue, it is in the most deplorable condition that can be. . . . As to the Treasury-part, Lord Clifford [Danby's predecessor] was a great man, and he left it flourishing, and in good order, and I know the King might have been supported in his necessities. I was Secretary to the Treasury, and look upon that charge as upon myself. The Revenue was then clear, and had no charge, and it was the felicity of Sir Thomas Osborne [Danby] to come in so. . . .<sup>25</sup>

It was resolved to seek a conference with the Lords, and to sequester Danby from Parliament; and on 24 March an address was presented to the King about the "irregularity and illegality" of the pardon.

On the twenty-fifth, Danby resigned as Lord Treasurer and went into hiding, and for a few days the House turned to other topics. (Howard expressed the majority opinion in the examination of Titus Oates when he resented Oates's attitude and his language but encouraged his evidence.) Danby gave himself up on 15 April and was sent to the Tower. He was asked whether he wished to insist on his pardon or to plead to the charges against him; and when he returned an answer that was branded "equivocal," some members were for postponing consideration for a few days. This did not suit Howard: "In this case I would not lose a minute. . . . I would proceed upon what is clearly before you . . . it is a favour to him to know whether he will stand upon his Pardon, or any other Plea."<sup>26</sup> The debate was adjourned until 5 May, when the pardon was declared "illegal and void" and the Lords were asked to make formal judgment on Danby.

On the seventh, eighth, and ninth there was much wrangling about
