Oceans Between Us Sereana Naepi,2025-07-10 Racism There we said it You can let your shoulders drop now that you know we will say the word and not sidestep it to protect people s comfort Or you can raise your shoulders in preparation for tension as you realise that this book will not talk about unconscious bias or other terms that enable us to excuse ourselves from our own complicity in inaction on or upholding of racist structures Sereana Naepi Salt water carries the weight of powerful stories of migration struggle and survival It is in the sweat of labour the tears of grief and joy and the waves that have shaped generations Like the ocean racism has carved deep scars in the landscapes we navigate In this collection thirteen Pacific scholars rise to turn the tide dissecting the racism embedded in New Zealand s core systems from education and health to justice and climate Through ten essays rooted in the va the relational space of story dialogue and environment each chapter builds on the next weaving together lived experiences and sharp insights Oceans Between Us is both a testimony and a call to action It documents the struggles of Pacific peoples and envisions a world beyond now A rallying cry for justice a demand for equity and a catalyst for change this book is not about survival alone it s about thriving Fern and the Tiki David Paul Ausubel,1960 Maori and the State Richard S. Hill,2010-04-01 Presenting the most recent research and written by an expert in the field this examination explores the principal interrelationships between the British Crown and the Maori people in the 1950s and 1960s when Crown assimilation policies intensified and during the 1970s when the pressure of the Maori renaissance encouraged policies and goals based on biculturalism A subject central to New Zealand s culture this is an important and historical analysis of the country and the wider issue of indigenous peoples rights

The Land Is Our History Miranda Johnson,2016-09-20 The Land Is Our History tells the story of indigenous legal activism at a critical political and cultural juncture in Australia Canada and New Zealand In the late 1960s indigenous activists protested assimilation policies and the usurpation of their lands as a new mining boom took off radically threatening their collective identities Often excluded from legal recourse in the past indigenous leaders took their claims to court with remarkable results For the first time their distinctive histories were admitted as evidence of their rights Miranda Johnson examines how indigenous peoples advocated for themselves in courts and commissions of inquiry between the early 1970s to the mid 1990s chronicling an extraordinary and overlooked history in which virtually disenfranchised peoples forced powerful settler democracies to reckon with their demands Based on extensive archival research and interviews with leading participants The Land Is Our History brings to the fore complex and rich discussions among activists lawyers anthropologists judges and others in the context of legal cases in far flung communities dealing with rights history and identity The effects of these debates were unexpectedly wide ranging By asserting that they were the first peoples of the land indigenous leaders compelled the powerful settler states that surrounded them to negotiate their rights and status Fracturing national myths and making new stories of origin necessary indigenous peoples claims challenged settler societies to rethink their sense of belonging Graham Latimer Noel Harrison, 2002 An engrossing biography of an outstanding Maori leader
