populations have fluctuated dramatically over the years. As current farming practices have evolved, the natural habitats and breeding patterns of many species have been disrupted. Urban and industrial growth has brought with it the pressures of new land use, pesticides, pollution, and human interference. The activities of sportsmen, collectors, and farmers have also taken their toll over the years. The new Poyser title The Historical Atlas of Breeding Birds in Britain and Ireland 1875-1900 is a fascinating book resulting from years of meticulous research by the author Simon Holloway, who provides an absorbing account of the distribution changes of Britain and Ireland's birds over the last quarter of a century. Large colour distribution maps and their accompanying text paint a species-by-species picture of a period which completely transformed the landscape of this country. It is, says Natural World magazine, a classic case of why did no one write this book before. The experienced birder, using a knowledge of species requirements, can only marvel at what the long vanished landscapes were then like. Birdwatch praises Simon Holloway's achievement, saying: 'This book brings together so much information from disparate sources and its status maps present such a clear picture of our late Victorian avifauna that it should take its place beside the BTO atlases on the bookshelf.' While Birdwatching adds: 'If you are interested in the historical side of birds and their populations, this book will be an endless source of fascination. As with all Poyser publications, the attention to detail, the lovingly produced illustrations, and the sheer breadth of knowledge demonstrated by the author
