Introduction

Foundational to the Christian faith is the belief that God is actively involved with His creation, and this particular belief tends to affect the way people interact with others within a chosen profession or career. However, human beings descend from Adam and Eve; they still bear the resemblance of God and are, therefore, still His masterpiece (Townes 32). Yes, some may believe that God's Spirit is long gone given the various sufferings and crime that is being experienced in today's world.

But it is important for people to remember and continue believing that God has not at all abandoned His creation and that He is still constantly providing for it through His grace (Elwell 51). The Scriptures tend to take up a most important part in God's dealing with human beings, and it is, therefore, not surprising to learn that more often than not, people have replaced the role of the Holy Spirit with that of the Scripture (Townes 33).

Discussion

The belief that God is still quite active in terms of His creation usually affects the way individuals relate with others within a chosen vocation. One text from the Scripture that illustrates God's involvement with man in this day and age is 2 Timothy 3:16 – 17, reminding us that Scripture is there to change us for the better, reproof us and instruct us in the right direction so that man can be found perfect through all good works (Robinson 101).

Science has, for many years, revealed that people would eventually destroy the Earth by global warming, an issue that is being experienced today. Colossians 1:17 reminds us that God holds all things together, and therefore, man cannot destroy what is held together by Him (Townes 35).

God is in control of all natural processes which include rain, snow, ice, thunder and lightning, and so forth, where His acts of preservation apply to all individuals, whether good or bad. The Bible also makes it quite clear that the Spirit of God is actively residing
