Newsome, 2010-07-05 Assemblies of rectangular stone pillars or stelae fill the plazas and courts of ancient Maya cities throughout the lowlands of southern Mexico Guatemala Belize and western Honduras Mute testimony to state rituals that linked the king s power to rule with the rhythms and renewal of time the stelae document the ritual acts of rulers who sacrificed danced and experienced visionary ecstasy in connection with celebrations marking the end of major calendrical cycles The kings portraits are carved in relief on the main surfaces of the stones deifying them as incarnations of the mythical trees of life Based on a thorough analysis of the imagery and inscriptions of seven stelae erected in the Great Plaza at Copan Honduras by the Classic Period ruler 18 Rabbit God K this ambitious study argues that stelae were erected not only to support a ruler s temporal claims to power but more importantly to express the fundamental connection in Maya worldview between rulership and the cosmology inherent in their vision of cyclical time After an overview of the archaeology and history of Copan and the reign and monuments of 18 Rabbit God K Elizabeth Newsome interprets the iconography and inscriptions on the stelae illustrating the way they fulfilled a coordinated vision of the king s ceremonial role in Copan s period ending rites She also links their imagery to key Maya concepts about the origin of the universe expressed in the

Rational Belief

in God and the Soul Loren Meierding,2024-04-15 After investigating the relevant evidence what should a rational person believe about the existence of God and his nature The first task is to examine evidence from natural religion that is from science and human observation The inductive evidence indicates overwhelming probability intelligent beings caused the Universe and life to exist Rational beings should hold the Principle of Sufficient Reason and if they do traditional deductive arguments for God s existence seem compelling There is a possibility given the evil in the world that the intelligent causes are benevolently disposed to human beings There is definitive evidence human souls can separate from their bodies while perceiving and understanding surrounding events Also the consensus gentium evidence provides some confirmation for theism So the evidence from natural theology shows a rational person should believe the first causes are intelligent powerful and perhaps benevolent but tell us little more Rational persons seeking any further knowledge of God must seek communications from God himself through revealed religion Miracles can provide key evidence for communications coming from God An argument for the occurrence of miracles is offered with some insightful examples The Bible makes important predictions or prophecies that came true Such events are only explained by intervention of a powerful intelligent being acting with a purpose Evidence about historical events from the Second Millennium onward show the reliability of the Bible Thus there are good grounds for concluding the Bible offers us communications from God It shows actions by him and provides information about his nature and purposes So given that the Old and New Testaments provide evidence about God we can draw conclusions about his nature and purposes and how human beings should live in response A number of Biblical passages emphasizing Jesus parables are cited They give readers an opportunity to decide for themselves
