

First Migration

- Bering Land Bridge was the method by which the first Paleo-Indians crossed into Alaska between 38,000-10,000 BC. The bridge was formed due to a warming pattern in the Earth's climate as Asian peoples walked across the bottom of the Bering Strait, a body of water between Russia and Alaska.
- First migration led the Paleo-Indians into Canada and then south into North/South America, as these hunter-gatherers followed the herds of animals.
- 8000 BC marks the end of the Ice Age creating new environments (climates and landscapes that surround living things).
- These environments developed new cultures (a group's set of common values and traditions).
- Societies changed over time as more people entered into North America/South America.
