British Naval Aviation in World War II Gilbert S. Guinn, G. H. Bennett, 2007-07-20 On the outcome of the Battle of the Atlantic from 1939 to 1945 depended Britain's survival in the midst of a global war The need to control the seaways to Britain was mirrored by a need to control the skies above Carrier based aircraft and seaplanes would play an important role in defeating the German submarine menace and in combating her surface fleet However at the start of World War II Britain possessed neither the training or industrial establishment necessary to develop this arm of warfare From 1940 onwards the United States provided answers to the problem firstly in the form of American built aircraft then American built aircraft carriers and finally American trained pilots Even before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor Royal Air Force and Fleet Air Arm pilots were being trained in the United States under a scheme set up by the United States Navy as part of the Lend Lease agreement In the safer skies over the United States American Navy pilots would train British aviation cadets how to fly and to fight This process is examined from a variety of different perspectives including the military diplomatic educational and cultural For many young British aviation cadets the journey across the Atlantic and across America was as surprising as it was lengthy Many would find themselves caught up with issues such as segregation in the American South of which they had little understanding The book is based on interviews and correspondence with hundreds of former cadets who trained in the United States in the 1940s together with material from the British and American archives

Lighter Than Air Guy Warner, 2016-06-30 Neville Florian Usborne entered the Royal Navy as a cadet in 1897 In the years between him joining up and the outbreak of the First World War he engaged in a huge number of enterprises and endeavours Praise and respect garnered in accordance with his achievements all helped to establish his reputation in later years as an irreplaceable pioneer and a leading light of early British airship design His fertile imagination and enterprising spirit fused to form a dynamic personality able in wartime to draw up countless schemes in an effort to outwit the enemy His chief task during the Great War was to dream up new tactics and designs to combat the Zeppelin menace perceived as one of the most damaging threats of the entire conflict He was also deeply involved in the design of the very successful SS and Coastal Class airships indeed during 1915 he was actually appointed Inspector

Commander of Airships at the Admiralty Unfortunately his illustrious career was destined to be cut short in 1916 when he was killed testing a prototype of one of his own designs This new biography seeks to shine a light on an overlooked pioneer of early aviation and it does so in entertaining and reverential style The importance of Usborne the pioneer is made plain as one of his contemporaries commented upon his death No one can talk of the early days of British airship design without mention of his name and work A personality was lost on that February day which was irreplaceable Tracing Your Seafaring
