Sculpture ,1995    Parkett ,1992    Das Schweizer Buch ,1993    Derek Jarman Tony Peake,2000 Biography of the outrageous and controversial filmmaker painter and gardener    Bernhard Mendes Bürgi. Exhibitions 1982-2016 Philipp Kaiser,2025-06-27 The publication concentrates on Bernhard Mendes Bürgi's more than thirty years of curatorial work The focus is on a typographically generously designed list of all 110 exhibitions that Bürgi has been responsible for particularly as director of the Kunsthalle Zürich and the Kunstmuseum Basel accompanied by many installation views A detailed discussion with Philipp Kaiser sheds light on the curatorial guidelines which are contextualized in current events The special significance of the ideal solo exhibition which always emerges anew from a close collaboration with the respective artist becomes apparent    Art Now Gallery Guide ,1993-07    Bibliographie der Bibliographien ,1995    Artforum International ,2000    Creative Camera ,1993    Annual Bibliography of Modern Art Museum of Modern Art (New York, N.Y.). Library,2001    Du ,2004-08    Japanese Technical Periodical Index ,1986    Crossing Empire's Edge Erik Esselstrom,2020-02-29 For more than half a century the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs Gaimusho possessed an independent police force that operated within the space of Japan's informal empire on the Asian continent Charged with protecting and controlling local Japanese communities first in Korea and later in China these consular police played a critical role in facilitating Japanese imperial expansion during the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries Remarkably however this police force remains largely unknown Crossing Empire's Edge is the first book in English to reveal its complex history Based on extensive analysis of both archival and recently published Japanese sources Erik Esselstrom describes how the Gaimusho police became deeply involved in the surveillance and suppression of the Korean independence movement in exile throughout Chinese treaty ports and the Manchurian frontier during the 1920s and 1930s It had in fact evolved over the years from a relatively benign public security organization into a full fledged political intelligence apparatus devoted to apprehending purveyors of dangerous thought throughout the empire Furthermore the history of consular police operations indicates that ideological crime was a borderless security problem Gaimusho police worked closely with colonial and metropolitan Japanese police forces to target Chinese Korean and Japanese suspects alike from Shanghai to Seoul to Tokyo Esselstrom thus offers a nuanced interpretation of Japanese expansionism by highlighting the transnational links between consular colonial and metropolitan policing of subversive political movements during the prewar and wartime eras In addition by illuminating the fervor with which consular police often pressed for unilateral solutions to Japan's political security crises on the continent he challenges orthodox understandings of the relationship between civil and military institutions within the imperial Japanese state While historians often still depict the Gaimusho as an inhibitor of unilateral military expansionism during the first half of the twentieth century Esselstrom's exposé on the activities and ideology of the consular police dramatically challenges this narrative Revealing a far greater complexity of motivation behind the Japanese colonial mission Crossing Empire's Edge boldly illustrates how the imperial Japanese state viewed political security at home as inextricably connected to political security abroad from as early as 1919 nearly a decade before overt military aggression began and approaches northeast Asia as a region of intricate and dynamic social economic and political forces In doing so Crossing Empire s Edge inspires new ways of thinking about both modern Japanese history and the modern history of Japan in East Asia     Access ,2003
