Kelly, 2013-02-22 Chapter 1 begins In the foregoing general dissertation on the Real Presence we have shown that the Catholic belief concerning the Eucharist has a claim to the serious consideration of all who love truth and justice We now propose to discuss more fully the foundations on which this belief rests and in the first place we shall endeavour by an appeal to the authority of the New Testament and the belief and teaching of the Church from the time of the Apostles to show that our Saviour in His love for man condescends to dwell on earth in the Sacrament of the Eucharist as truly as He does in heaven where His glory is manifested Then we shall put before the reader our reasons for believing that Our Lord at the Last Supper instituted a Sacrifice as well as a Sacrament and that that Sacrifice has been offered up continuously from the time of the Apostles to the present day Then proceeds a defense of the doctrine of the Church in regard to the Real Presence of Jesus Christ in the Most Holy Eucharist Then follows a chapter on the Last Supper and this is followed by a chapter on the mode of the fulfillment of Jesus' command that we eat His Body and drink His Blood In the chapter on the testimony of history we read In showing that Scripture in itself affords to any Christian a sufficiently reasonable proof of the Catholic doctrine we have done even more than was necessary for it would have been sufficient to show that the doctrine was not opposed to the teaching of Scripture The primary criterion of Christian dogma is not

Scripture but the authoritative teaching of the Catholic Church The truths taught in Scripture were taught by the Church before the Gospels were written and several hundred years before the New Testament began to exist in its present form Hence if we believed only what is expressly stated in Scripture we would have no foundation at all for our belief for we have to accept the Scriptures themselves and their inspiration on the authority of the Church There is no Scriptural proof that the Gospels and Epistles were divinely inspired nor is there any Scriptural proof of the authorship of many of the writings of the New Testament It was the Catholic Church which in a General Council collected these sacred writings together and testified to their genuineness and inspiration IN the chapter on the old sacrifices we read In the meantime as He did not wish to leave His children without help He taught our first parents a religious rite by which they and their descendants might have a present interest in the work of redemption This religious rite was Sacrifice and it prefigured the great Sacrifice which the Redeemer should offer up on Calvary It was established as the proper means of performing that public duty of worship which man owes to God as His Creator and Sovereign Lord and also to serve as a continual reminder of his sinfulness and need of forgiveness so that by the offering of sacrifice men offered themselves to God acknowledged their dependence upon Him and made expiation for their sins In his state of innocence man was bound to worship God since He owed everything to Him After his fall the obligation became more pressing for he then owed God not only the homage of his entire being but also the penalty of death "Art not thou also one of this Man's Disciples?"
