Robert Louis Stevenson in the Pacific Roslyn Jolly, 2016-12-05

Robert Louis Stevenson's departure from Europe in 1887 coincided with a vocational crisis prompted by his father's death. Impatient with his established identity as a writer, Stevenson was eager to explore different ways of writing at the same time that living in the Pacific stimulated a range of latent intellectual and political interests. Roslyn Jolly examines the crucial period from 1887 to 1894 focusing on the self-transformation wrought in Stevenson's Pacific travel writing and political texts. Jolly shows how Stevenson's desire to understand unfamiliar Polynesian and Micronesian cultures and to record and intervene in the politics of Samoa gave him opportunities to use his legal education pursue his interest in historiography and experiment with anthropology and journalism. Thus as his geographical and cultural horizons expanded Stevenson's professional sphere enlarged as well stretching the category of authorship in which his successes as a novelist had placed him. Rather than enhancing his stature as a popular writer however Stevenson's experiments with new styles and genres and the Pacific subject matter of his later works were resisted by his readers. Jolly's analysis of contemporary responses to Stevenson's writing gleaned from an extensive collection of reviews many of which are not readily available provides fascinating insights into the interests, obsessions and resistances of Victorian readers. As Stevenson sought to escape the vocational straightjacket that confined him his readers just as strenuously expressed their loyalty to outmoded images of Stevenson the author and their distrust of the new guises in which he presented himself

Wilson Greene, 2008 The Petersburg Campaign was what finally did it After months of relentless conflict throughout 1864 the Confederate army led by General Robert E Lee holed up in the Virginia city of Petersburg as Lieutenant General Ulysses S Grant s vastly superior forces lurked nearby The brutal fighting that took place around the city during 1864 and into 1865 decimated both armies as Grant used his manpower advantage to repeatedly smash the Confederate lines a tactic that eventually resulted in the decisive breakthrough that ultimately doomed the Confederacy The breakthrough and the events that led up to it are the subject of A Wilson Greene s groundbreaking book The Final Battles of the Petersburg Campaign a significant revision of a much praised work first published in 2000 Surprisingly despite Petersburg s decisive importance to the war s outcome the campaign has received scant attention from historians Greene s book with its incisive analysis and compelling narrative changes this offering readers a rich account of the personalities and strategies that shaped the final phase of the fighting Greene s ultimate focus on the climatic engagements of April 2 1865 the day that Confederate control of Richmond and Petersburg was effectively ended The book tells this story from the perspectives of the two army groups that clashed on that day the Union Sixth Corps and the Confederate Third Corps But Greene does more than just recount the military tactics at Petersburg he also connects the reader intimately with how the war affected society and spotlights the soldiers both officers and enlisted men whose experiences defined the outcome Thanks to his extensive research and consultation of rare source materials Greene gives readers a vibrant perspective on the campaign that broke the Confederate spirit once and for all A Wilson Greene is president of Pamplin Historical Park The National Museum of the Civil War Soldier near Petersburg Virginia He also has taught at Mary Washington College and worked for sixteen years with the National Park Service Battle Honours of the British Army Charles Boswell Norman, 1911 In the following pages I have endeavoured to give a brief description of the various actions the names of which are emblazoned on the colours and appointments of the regiments in the British army So far as I have been able I have shown the part that each individual corps has played in every engagement by appending to the account a return of the losses suffered Unfortunately in some cases casualty rolls are not obtainable in others owing to the returns having been hurriedly prepared and later corrections neglected the true losses of regiments do not appear The whole question of the award of battle honours abounds in anomalies Paltry skirmishes have been immortalized and many gallant fights have been left unrecorded In some cases certain corps have been singled out for honour others which bore an equal share in the same day's doings have been denied the privilege of assuming the battle honour In some campaigns every skirmish has been handed down to posterity in others one word has covered long years of fighting Mysore with its one honour and Persia with four are cases in point In some instances honours have been refused on the plea that the headquarters of the regiment was not present in the action in others the honour has been granted when but a single troop or company has shared in the fight There are regiments whose colours bear the names of battles in which they did not lose a single man others have suffered heavy losses in historic battles which are as yet unrecorded At Schellenberg for example Marlborough's earliest victory and one unaccountably absent from our colours the losses of the fifteen regiments engaged exceeded the total casualties of the whole army in the campaign in Afghanistan from 1879 to 1881 for which no less than seven battle honours were granted Esprit de corps is the keystone of the discipline of the British army and the regimental colours are the living symbol of that esprit de corps It is to their colours that men look as the emblems of their regimental history and on those colours are or should be emblazoned the names of all historic battles in which the regiment has been engaged A soldier knows or ought to know the history of his own regiment but the moment arrives when his curiosity is piqued and he wishes to learn something about a corps which has fought side by side with his own Perchance curiosity may be excited as to the reason why Copenhagen appears on the appointments of the Rifle Brigade and Arabia on the colours of the York and Lancaster or how it comes about that Dominica is alone borne by the Cornwalls and Pondicherry by the Dublin Fusiliers I have made no attempt to deal exhaustively with the subject that would be beyond my powers and would open up too wide a field I have therefore touched but lightly on those campaigns such as the Peninsular and Waterloo which are familiar to everyone in the least conversant with the history of his country and have dwelt in more detail with those wars which are less well known Memories are short Already the South African War has been effaced by that titanic struggle between Russia and Japan How then can the ordinary man be expected to carry in his mind even the rough outline of the Defence of Chitral an episode which rivals Arcot in the heroism of its few defenders or of Mangalore and Corygaum which were in no way inferior in point of steadfast gallantry When I read of the efforts made to insure the regular supply of jam during the South African War my mind turns to Chitral where the daily ration for six long weeks was one pound of flour a day rice and meat being issued only on the doctors orders the one antiseptic available being carbolic tooth powder Or I think of Mangalore which capitulated after Campbell had cut up his last horse and served out his last ration of flour To be continue in this ebook

Edward J. Steptoe and the Indian Wars Ron McFarland, 2016-02-11 Lieutenant Colonel Edward J Steptoe s escape from encirclement by 1 000 Northern Plateau Indians in 1858 is a familiar story from the Indian Wars Yet the details of the Battle of Pine Creek or Tohotonimme and its aftermath remain subjects of debate Outnumbered six to one Steptoe s 164 troops slipped away in the night Newspapers called it a disaster A few weeks later Colonel George Wright avenged the defeat and Steptoe who had suffered a stroke months before the battle lived his final years in relative obscurity in his native Virginia as the Civil War erupted This definitive biography of Steptoe chronicles the career of a field officer who served nearly four years in the Second Seminole War won commendation for gallantry during the Mexican War performed admirably though controversially in the Utah Territory undertook construction of forts at Walla Walla in the newly defined Washington Territory and engaged with various tribes throughout his deployments His personal letters reveal a thoughtful sensitive
