The fifteen decisive battles of the world, from Marathon to Waterloo sir Edward Shepherd Creasy, 1851 The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World Edward Creasy, 2014-02-17

This is a fascinating view of the most important battles as seen from the perspective of 1851. Since it was written over 160 years ago and should not be expected to reflect modern sensibilities. While many of us are at least aware of the battle of Marathon, the battle of Arbela, and Metaurus are not nearly so well remembered today. Look back a century and a half to see what they thought which were the most important conflicts and how they saw them. Well worth spending a quiet evening in the company of Sir Edward Shepherd Creasy. His view is very Eurocentric and his faith is a reflection of Muscular Christianity, a concept popular at the time of this book's creation. This was written in the heyday of the New Imperialism that saw European, American, and Asian expansion that went well into the 20th century and culminated in World War II. This book is a classic in the field of military history Historical writers who can weave myth and symbolism in to their writing carry forward important ideas and concepts for the collective This is precisely what Creasy has done in his book organizing his material around the idea that war is productive of something He influenced every writer of military history who followed That in itself is enough to promote the book 15 Decisive Battles is an excellent introduction to general military history a perspective often missing in college history courses Creasy is a generalist but for that very reason this a good book to start with Written long ago his book necessarily omits more recent military candidates yet vividly captures 15 moments when history stood at a cusp perhaps Marathon and Waterloo in particular
