In the Eye of the Animal Patricia Cox Miller, 2018-06-15 Early Christian theology posited a strict division between animals and humans Nevertheless animal figures abound in early Christian literature and art from Augustine's renowned wonder at the agility of the mosquito on the wing to vivid exegeses of the six days of creation detailed in Genesis and when they appear the distinctions between human and animal are often dissolved How asks Patricia Cox Miller does one account for the stunning zoological imagination found in a wide variety of genres of ancient Christian texts In the Eye of the Animal complicates the role of animals in early Christian thought by showing how textual and artistic images and interpretive procedures actually celebrated a continuum of human and animal life Synthesizing early Christian studies contemporary philosophy animal studies ethology and modern poetry Miller identifies two contradictory strands in early Christian thinking about animals The dominant thread viewed the body and soul of the human being as dominical or the crowning achievement of creation animals with their defective souls related to humans only as reminders of the brutish physical form However the second strand relied upon the idea of a continuum of animal life which enabled comparisons between animals and humans This second tendency explains Miller arises particularly in early Christian literature in which ascetic identity the body and ethics intersect She explores the tension between these modes by tracing the image of the animal in early Christian literature from the ethical animal behavior on display in Basil of Caesarea's Hexaemeron and the anonymous Physiologus to the role of animals in articulating erotic desire and from the idyllic intimacy of monks and animals in literature of desert ascetism to early Christian art that envisions paradise through human animal symbiosis

The Eye of the Lynx David Freedberg, 2003-08-01 Some years ago David Freedberg opened a dusty cupboard at Windsor Castle and discovered hundreds of vividly colored masterfully precise drawings of all sorts of plants and animals from the Old and New Worlds Coming upon thousands more drawings like them across Europe Freedberg finally traced them all back to a little known scientific organization from seventeenth century Italy called the Academy of Linceans or Lynxes Founded by Prince Federico Cesi in 1603 the Linceans took as their task nothing less than the documentation and classification of all of nature in pictorial form In this first book length study of the Linceans to appear in English Freedberg focuses especially on their unprecedented use of drawings based on microscopic observation and other new techniques of visualization Where previous thinkers had classified objects based mainly on similarities of external appearance the Linceans instead turned increasingly to sectioning dissection and observation of internal structures

They applied their new research techniques to an incredible variety of subjects from the objects in the heavens studied by their most famous and infamous member Galileo Galilei whom they supported at the most critical moments of his career to the flora and fauna of Mexico bees fossils and the reproduction of plants and fungi But by demonstrating the inadequacy of surface structures for ordering the world the Linceans unwittingly planted the seeds for the demise of their own favorite method visual description as a mode of scientific classification Profusely illustrated and engagingly written Eye of the Lynx uncovers a crucial episode in the development of visual representation and natural history And perhaps as important it offers readers a dazzling array of early modern drawings from magnificently depicted birds and flowers to frogs in amber monstrously misshapen citrus fruits and more
