Art of Darkness , Night Windows Jonathan Smith,2012-07-26 Someone has stolen Patrick Balfour s identity A successful headmaster of a London school a regular broadcaster and a writer of historical novels as well as having a fairly spicy private life Balfour is the object of some unsurprising envy Yet who would be so malicious as to commit identity fraud and frame Patrick as a thief and a paedophile using his national insurance number and impersonating his handwriting As Patrick is teased by a series of letters it becomes apparent that his adversary is certainly better read than him and he is sent off on a tense literary chase picking up clues from Kafka s The Trial to R L Stevenson and to Joseph Clark a 17th Century contortionist Patrick s morale begins to collapse the police don t believe him and his daughter rejects him Desperate he decides he must pursue his pursuer

Rumbling down a winding country road in West Virginia Charlie was at peace for the first time in several days Maybe it was the isolation of the tree lined open road on a sunny spring day in April or the physical distance from his problems but for the moment Charlie was happy Each bend in this narrow road from Roanoke Virginia into West Virginia erased one peaceful scene and replaced it with another Houses on the road were rare and the few he spotted were seemingly abandoned Choosing to enjoy the solitude Charlie rode along slowly even below the speed limit a rarity in his fast paced life To his left in one idyllic setting a stag deer was bounding through a pasture followed by two younger does drawing his attention to their freedom They approached a fence and cleared it easily in a smooth gliding leap They were out of sight in seconds but the scene added to his feeling of contentment Suddenly in a shock of reality Charlie saw a huge white truck come barreling down on him from behind at twice his speed As his BMW and the truck approached a long sweeping curve the truck moved over to pass Hes crazy Charlie thought as he hit his brakes and moved to the edge of the road giving the truck driver the needed room to pass and slow down in time to handle the curve I guess Im not the only one who needs to relax Charlie thought forgiving the trucker for trying to ruin his good day Up ahead he could see the driver of the white truck taking chances apparently in a rush to make a tight schedule but Charlie knew he was pushing it too hard for the road they were on a twisting two lane state road with short straight passages followed by deceptively dangerous curves Charlies gaze followed the speeding truck as it became a smaller and smaller form on a long straight stretch of the road ahead In a fateful moment the truck flashed its undercarriage at a curve in the road and careened out of sight Several seconds later Charlie was viewing the wrecked truck on its side about twenty feet below the roadway tangled in the dense mountain foliage If Charlie had not seen the truck leave the road stopped and walked to the edge of the precipice he would have driven past and never seen the wreckage but there it was lying helplessly on its side having apparently flipped over before crashing into a huge old oak tree It was a plain two ton enclosed bed truck without markings of any kind Lying on its left side its right front wheel was still turning like a giant beast feeling the impulse to move as it lay dying Smoke drifted up from the engine But there was a strange silence There were no calls for help no signs of movement and no other cars in sight Charlie stumbled and scrambled down the steep bank calling for someone to answer him But he heard nothing Through the broken windshield he could see the driver who appeared dazed with blood on the left side of his head from an unseen cut but he was moving Since the drivers door was pressed into the dirt Charlie knew the man could only escape through the passenger door which was now on top So Charlie climbed up to open it Gravity made the task much harder than hed expected but he did get it open Keeping it open would be a full time job so Charlie lowered the window and let the door fall back into place By then the driver was alert struggling to free himself and crying out in pain at each movement Just lay still Charlie said Ill go get some help Theres no time for that cried the tortured man the engine is burning already and I don't have an extinguisher Lying on the truck's passenger door with his head in the side window Charlie almost pleaded How can I help He could see the man's bleeding leg trapped in the wreckage Could it be freed in time Pull me loose the man shouted in pain and panic offering Charlie his hand Charlie pulled The SAGE
