

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN

The English language has many words that are similar in meaning, but have subtle differences in usage. This can be confusing for native speakers and learners alike.

Affect vs. Effect

Affect is a verb that means to influence or change something. Effect is a noun that means a result or consequence.

Examples:

- The new law will affect the way we do business.
- The effects of the earthquake were devastating.

A good rule of thumb is to use affect as a verb and effect as a noun. However, there are a few exceptions to this rule.

In this article, we will discuss some of the most common English words that are often confused, and explain the difference between them.
