The Political Philosophy of the European City Ferenc Hörcher, 2021-06-03

The Political Philosophy of the European City is a courageous and wide ranging panorama of the political life and thought of the European city. Its novel hypothesis is that modern Western political thought since the time of Hobbes and Locke underestimated the political significance and value of the community of urban citizens called civitas united by local customs or even a formal or informal urban constitution at a certain location which had a recognizable countenance with natural and man made architectural marks called urbs. Recalling the golden age of the European city in ancient Greece and Rome and offering a detailed description of its turbulent life in the Renaissance Italian city states it makes a case for the city not only as a hotbed of modern democracy but also as a remedy for some of the distortions of political life in the alienated contemporary centralized Weberian bureaucratic state. Overcoming the north south divide or the core and periphery partition the book's material is particularly rich in Central European case studies. All in all it is an enjoyable read which offers sound arguments to revisit the offer of the small and middle sized European town in search of a more sustainable future for Europe.

Migration and the European City Christoph Cornelißen, Beat Kümin, Massimo Rospoche, 2022-03-07

Looking back over the centuries migration has always formed an important part of human existence. Spatial mobility emerges as a key driver of urban evolution characterized by situation specific combinations of opportunities, restrictions and fears. This collection of essays investigates interactions between European cities and migration between the early modern period and the present. Building on conceptual approaches from history, sociology and cultural studies, twelve contributions focus on policies, representations and the impact on local communities more generally. Combining case studies and theoretical reflections, the volume's contributions engage with a variety of topics and disciplinary perspectives yet also with several common themes. One revolves around problems of definition both in terms of demarcating cities from their surroundings and of distinguishing migration in a narrower sense from other forms of short and long distance mobility. Further shared concerns include the integration of multiple analytical scales, contextual factors and diachronic variables such as urbanization, industrialization and the digital revolution.

The European City and Green Space Peter Clark, 2016-12-05

Recent years have seen sustained public debate and controversy over the greening of European cities associated with the environmental movement, pressures of urban redevelopment and the promotional strategies of cities competing in a global market. But the European debate over urban green space has a long history dating back to Victorian concerns for the green lungs of the city to combat the health and social problems caused by rapid population and industrial growth. This book explores the multiplicity of green space developments in the modern city ranging over parks and commons, garden suburbs and the cities in the park, allotment gardens, green belts and national urban parks. It is concerned not only with the different types of green space but the many influences shaping their evolution from international planning ideas to the rise of modern day sport and leisure and the effects of the transport revolution No less vital in this story is the interaction of the many actors involved in the often fractious political process of creating green spaces architects and planners politicians developers and other businessmen NGOs and local residents This volume is particularly concerned with contexts how international planning ideas are transmitted and adapted in different European cities how the construction of green space is affected by local power structures and relationships and how ordinary people perceive and use green spaces quite often at variance with official designs The European City and Green Space looks at these and other issues through the prism of four metropolises London Stockholm Helsinki and St Petersburg All represent different types of North European city yet each has experienced distinctive economic political and cultural trajectories whilst also facing powerful challenges and problems of similar kinds with regard to green space This volume examines how each has responded to them and what patterns emerge

Green Landscapes in the European City, 1750-2010 Peter Clark, Marjaana Niemi, Catharina Nolin, 2016-12-08 Green space is a fundamental concept for understanding modern and contemporary urban society shedding light not only on the ecological development of cities but also societal relations urban governance and planning processes Closely linked to issues of environmental change changing perceptions of nature urban well being and social integration as well as city economic competitiveness and branding it is an important element both in the internationalisation of European cities and the forging of their distinctive communal identities Building upon recent research on the history of green landscapes in the city in Europe and North America this volume mirrors the burgeoning global attention to urban green space developments from city policy makers and planners architects climatologists ecologists geographers and other social scientists Taking case studies from Paris London Berlin Helsinki and other leading centres the volume examines when why and how green landscapes evolved in major cities and the extent to which they have been shaped by shared external forces as well as by distinctive and specific local needs Quantifying green space trends in this way raises important issues of classification and categorisation of the different varieties of urban green space While urban parks have received considerable coverage many other smaller less prestigious spaces have been largely ignored This volume argues that green landscapes can only be properly understood when the full range of spaces from parks to recreation grounds housing areas allotments and domestic gardens is taken into account Adopting a broader approach to urban green space helps put European developments during the 19th and 20th centuries into a global perspective

Sport, Recreation and Green Space in the European City Peter Clark, Marjaana Niemi, Jari Niemelä, 2009-12-31 Green space has become a major issue in European cities in recent years as a result of enhanced environmental awareness urban marketing planning policy and growing population densities Up to now however the subject of sports areas and grounds has attracted little research despite the fact that since the First World War such public and private areas from football pitches and running tracks to golf courses and tennis courts have often comprised one of the most important and extensive types of green space in the European city This book presents a pioneering comparative and multidisciplinary analysis of the development use and impact of sports areas in the European city from the start of the 20th century up to the present time Employing a range of historical spatial and ecological approaches it examines when and why sports areas evolved the contribution of municipalities and the private sector the role of gender and class and the impact on the urban landscape and ecology Chapters cover urban sports areas in Finland Britain the Netherlands Germany and Italy illustrating the contrasts in the provision of green space across Europe

Migration and the European City Christoph Cornelißen, Beat Kümin, Massimo Rospocher, 2022 Migration has always formed an important part of human existence Spatial mobility emerges as a key driver of urban evolution This collection of essays investigates interactions between European cities and migration between c 1400 and the present

A Modern History of European Cities Rosemary Wakeman, 2020-01-23 Rosemary Wakeman s original survey text comprehensively explores modern European urban history from 1815 to the present day It provides a journey to cities and towns across the continent in search of the patterns of development that have shaped the urban landscape as indelibly European The focus is on the built environment the social and cultural transformations that mark the patterns of continuity and change and the transition to modern urban society Including over 60 images that serve to illuminate the analysis the book examines whether there is a European city and if so what are its characteristics Wakeman offers an interdisciplinary approach that incorporates concepts from cultural and postcolonial studies as well as urban geography and provides full coverage of urban society not only in western Europe but also in eastern and southern Europe using various cities and city types to inform the discussion The book provides detailed coverage of the often neglected urbanization post 1945 which allows us to more clearly understand the modernizing arc Europe has followed over the last two centuries

The European City Leonardo Benevolo, 1995-11-15 This is a history of the European city from the early Middle Ages to the present Tracing the city from the survival of urban life after the collapse of the Roman Empire to the effects of modern industrialization and transportation Professor Benevolo s book also provides a fascinating account of the relationship between urban life and cultural and intellectual life

On the Economic Base of the European City Antonio Calafati, 2015 European cities growth rates were strikingly different in the decades 1950 1990 during the long phase of macro economic expansion and controlled institutional evolution ensured by the construction of the European To the extent that most cities were anyway following a development trajectory with increasing per capita well being the focus could be mainly on attaining a satisfying degree of social cohesion The economic base issue resurfaced in the European in the 1990s Firstly the institutional and economic transition in Central and Eastern Europe was associated with the collapse of the economic bases in most cities of this territory Secondly urban and territorial crisis began to be apparent in an increasing number of EU countries It was no longer a matter of different but positive growth rates in cities economic bases but rather a matter of stagnation and decline

The increasing manifestations of urban and territorial crisis have shifted the focus of strategic planning from spatial to economic issues. A variety of policy responses to decline and stagnation in European cities economic bases have been proposed and an optimistic attitude towards the capacity of cities to maintain restructure and expand their economic bases has consolidated. This optimism seems to be grounded in a stereotyped understanding of the forces that shape the long run growth and development trajectories of European cities.
