The Earthquake Catalogue of the British Association, with the Discussion, Curves, and Maps, Etc Mallet, 1858

The Earthquake Catalogue of the British Association Robert Mallet, John William Mallet, British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1858 A History of British Earthquakes Charles Davison, 1924 A History of British Earthquakes Charles Davison,

The Earthquake Observers Deborah R. Coen, 2013 Earthquakes have taught us much about our planet's hidden structure and the forces that have shaped it. This book explains how observing networks transformed an instant of panic and confusion into a field for scientific research, turning earthquakes into natural experiments at the nexus of the physical and human sciences. The Great English Earthquake Peter Haining, 2002-08-30 The event was a stunning blow to Victorian England, the heart of the great British Empire. Consequently, its extent and damage were played down by the authorities and the national press. Based on contemporary reports, personal statements, and exhaustive research, this illustrated history is a dramatic and exciting reconstruction of the event. On the morning of 22 April 1884, the unthinkable happened: a major earthquake struck the British Isles. In under a minute, almost the entire length and breadth of England had been shaken by a violent tremor which devastated the county of Essex, its epicentre, and caused damage and panic as far north as Altrincham, Cheshire, and to the south was registered across the English Channel in Boulogne and Calais. It was about 9:20 a.m. that a peculiar and alarming noise was suddenly heard, which to some seemed to be overhead, to others underground, and which has been variously compared to distant thunder, to the rumbling of a heavy wagon, to the discharge of a volley of infantry, or to the whirring of a huge flock of birds as they rise from the ground or floor beneath one's feet, and of the swaying to and fro of walls, houses, and all kinds of fixed outdoors: bricks, tiles, chimneys, etc., began to clatter down. The noise seemed loudest indoors, but perhaps the experience of those who were standing still in the open air was yet more alarming, for they could see the solid earth as well as whatever was upon it tremble and heave up and down. In some places, the earth even in the Scripture phrase "Opened her mouth." An eyewitness's account of the 1884 earthquake.

The People's Year Book and Annual of the English & Scottish Wholesale Societies, 1927 The English Cyclopædia, 1861 Documenting Aftermath Megan Finn, 2024-07-23 An examination of how changing public information infrastructures shaped people's experience of earthquakes in Northern California in 1868, 1906, and 1989. When an earthquake happens in California today, residents may look to the United States Geological Survey for online maps that show the quake's epicenter, turn to Twitter for government bulletins, and the latest news; check Facebook for updates from friends and family, and count on help from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). One hundred and fifty years ago, however, FEMA and other government agencies did not exist, and information came by telegraph and newspaper. In Documenting Aftermath, Megan Finn explores changing public information infrastructures and how they shaped people's experience of disaster, examining post-earthquake information and communication practices in three Northern California earthquakes the 1868 Hayward Fault earthquake the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire and the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake She then analyzes the institutions policies and technologies that shape today s postdisaster information landscape Finn argues that information orders complex constellations of institutions technologies and practices influence how we act in experience and document events What Finn terms event epistemologies constituted both by historical documents and by researchers who study them explain how information orders facilitate particular possibilities for knowledge After the 1868 earthquake the Chamber of Commerce telegraphed reassurances to out of state investors while local newspapers ran sensational earthquake narratives in 1906 families and institutions used innovative techniques for locating people and in 1989 government institutions and the media developed a symbiotic relationship in information dissemination Today government disaster response plans and new media platforms imagine different sources of informational authority yet work together shaping disaster narratives
