Language in the Judicial Process Judith N. Levi, Anne Graffam Walker, 2013-11-11 Legal realism is a powerful jurisprudential tradition which urges attention to social conditions and predicts their influence in the legal process The relatively recent social science in the law phenomenon in which social research is increasingly relied on to decide court cases is a direct result of realistic jurisprudence which accords much significance in law to empirical reports about social behavior The empirical research used by courts has not however commonly dealt with language as an influential variable This volume of essays coedited by Judith N Levi and Anne Graffam Walker will likely change that situation Language in the Judicial Process is a superb collection of original work which fits well into the realist tradition and by focusing on language as a key variable it establishes a new and provocative perspective on the legal process The perspective it offers and the data it presents make this volume a valuable source of information both for judges and lawyers who may be chiefly concerned with practice and for legal scholars and social scientists who do basic research about law

Engaging Displaced Populations in a Future Syrian

Transitional Justice Process Grace Mieszkalski, Benjamin Zyla, 2021-08-23 This book offers an analysis of a prospective transitional justice process in Syria As the Syrian conflict enters into its tenth year this book asks how the sustained human rights violations and war crimes could possibly be addressed in a post conflict setting particularly in the context of the widespread displacement crisis Despite a recent movement in scholarship toward bottom up peacebuilding approaches and participatory transitional justice models the transitional justice and local peacebuilding nexus remains under theorized particularly as it relates to the engagement of displaced populations This book seeks to address this gap through the conceptualization of a locally driven transitional justice process for Syria that is founded on the integration of refugees and displaced populations Through offering a series of policy recommendations on how to implement such a process it aims to make a contribution to building a bridge of exchange between the policy practitioner world and the academy in this area of study
