and forensic developmental psychology Developmental psychology complements several other basic research fields in psychology including social psychology cognitive psychology ecological psychology and comparative psychology Developmental psychology as a discipline did not exist until after the industrial revolution when the need for an educated workforce led to the social construction of childhood as a distinct stage in a person's life The notion of childhood originates in the western world and this is why the early research derives from this location Initially developmental psychologists were interested in studying the mind of the child so that education and learning could be more effective A significant issue in developmental psychology is the relationship between innateness and environmental influence in regard to any particular aspect of development The book will be of use to the students researchers and general readers of this subject How Children Develop Robert S. The Self-system Annerieke Oosterwegel, Louis Oppenheimer, 2013-05-13 This book presents a longitudinal study dealing with developmental changes within and between self concepts and their relation to personal functioning Within the psychological literature and the developmental literature in particular the interest in the ideas people hold about themselves and their relation with personal functioning is rapidly growing This interest is reinforced by the emphasis on individuality in Western society The self system is now thought to consist of a collection of self concepts in which a distinction is made between domain specific self concepts the real and ideal and context related self concepts the academic the athletic and the social It is also considered to be subjective rather than objective This subjective self involves characteristics such as continuity and distinctiveness from others These characteristics have been the primary focus of recent research In existing literature on the development of the self system little is known about the structural characteristics that is developmental changes in the interrelationships among domain specific and context related self concepts or between and within self concepts Similarly little information is available about the relationships between individuals real and ideal self concepts their perceived concepts of others and the actual ideas others have about the same individuals This book integrates hitherto separate and different components or aspects of self knowledge into one encompassing multidimensional self system
