

The Tet Offensive: The Turning Point of the Vietnam War

By January 1968, American ground troops had been fighting in Vietnam for almost three years with little success. The U.S. had provided political, economic, and military support to the government of South Vietnam for a decade and a half while the North Vietnamese forces and their southern allies, the National Liberation Front (NLF), gained strength. Under President Lyndon Baines Johnson (LBJ), the U.S. steadily increased its troop commitments in Vietnam throughout the mid-1960s, and although Johnson claimed American and South Vietnamese military success, the Tet Offensive of January and February 1968 demonstrated otherwise. During a cease-fire in honor of Tet, the Vietnamese lunar New Year, Communist forces coordinated an attack on key cities and American military bases throughout South Vietnam. Although American and South Vietnamese forces eventually repelled the attack, North Vietnam and the NLF had some initial successes, including a siege of the American embassy building in Saigon. Many historians consider the Tet Offensive a psychological victory for the Communist forces and a political defeat for the U.S.

Background and Preparation

North Vietnam and the NLF launched the Tet Offensive in hopes of forcing the U.S. to the negotiating table and halting the American bombing campaign. Hanoi also hoped to weaken the Saigon government and drive a wedge between South Vietnam and the U.S. Beginning in late 1967, the Hanoi government began a strategy of attacking remote areas to lure American troops away from the large cities and towns in South Vietnam. They focused their attacks especially on the Marine garrison at Khe Sanh, just south of the demilitarized zone and near the Laotian border. Over 30,000 American troops had been diverted to Khe Sanh at the height of the siege, leaving Saigon, Hue, Da Nang, Pleiku, and other urban areas vulnerable in late 1967-early 1968. Both sides had traditionally observed a cease-fire during Tet, the lunar New Year and an important Vietnamese holiday at the end of January, and South Vietnamese soldiers and officials were celebrating and away from their posts and offices.

In late 1967, despite the growing antiwar movement, the White House and the Pentagon publicly pledged victory in Vietnam and asserted that the war was nearing its successful conclusion. General
