

The background of the cover is a microscopic view. It features several large, red, biconcave disc-shaped cells, which are red blood cells, scattered across the field. Interspersed among these are various blue-green structures. Some are small, round, and have a fuzzy or granular surface. Others are more elongated and have several thin, hair-like projections or spikes extending from their surface. These likely represent different types of microorganisms, such as bacteria or viruses, in a fluid environment.
