Sleeping and Waking Disorders Christian Guilleminault, 1982      Handbook of Clinical Psychology in Medical Settings

Ronald H. Rozensky, Jerry J. Sweet, Steven M. Tuvian, 2013-06-29 For two decades I have been responding to questions about the nature of health psychology and how it differs from medical psychology behavioral medicine and clinical psychology From the beginning I have taken the position that any application of psychological theory or practice to problems and issues of the health system is health psychology I have repeatedly used an analogy to Newell and Simon's General Problem Solver program of the late 1950s and early 1960s which had two major functional parts in addition to the executive component One was the problem solving core the procedural competence the other was the representation of the problem environment In the analogy the concepts knowledge and techniques of psychology constitute the core competence the health system in all its complexity is the problem environment A health psychologist is one whose basic competence in psychology is augmented by a working knowledge of some aspect of the health system Quite apparently there are functionally distinct aspects of health psychology to the degree that there are meaningful subdivisions in psychological competence and significantly different microenvironments within the health system I hesitate to refer to them as areas of specialization as the man who gave health psychology its formal definition Joseph Matarazzo has said that there are no specialties in psychology cited in the editors preface to this book      Fundamentals of Sleep Technology Teofilo L. Lee-Chiong, Cynthia Mattice, Rita Brooks, 2019-03-19

Handbook of Clinical Behavior Therapy with the Elderly Client Patricia A. Wisocki, 2013-11-21 Although we speak of the elderly as if there were one body of people with common characteristics older adults are more heterogeneous than any other population People over the age of 65 are also the fastest growing segment of the population in the United States currently numbering 25 million The majority of older adults reside in their communities a small fraction of them are cared for in institutions Most may expect to experience some kind of physical impairment Approximately a quarter of the population may expect to suffer a mental health impairment While traditional therapies have not been especially effective for older adults behavior therapy has shown exceptional promise as a treatment modality This book presents a comprehensive explication of the relatively new field of behavioral gerontology It was written for the clinician interested in the interaction of medical environmental and psychological variables and their effects on treatment of elderly clients and for the researcher who will be looking to extend knowledge about interventions with this population It will be useful for the graduate student in clinical psychology as well as the experienced clinician who will want to include the elderly in his or her therapeutic population
