

Annotated Bibliography for Children's Literature

1. Whoever You Are by Mem Fox (empathy)
Florida: Harcourt, Brace & Company, 1997

Beautiful picture book presents the message that children all over the world have similar hearts, emotions and dreams despite differences of geography, race or religion. This is a great book to discuss the things that make human beings similar, beyond basic needs and wants.

2. Fly Away Home by Eve Bunting (community)
New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1991

A young boy describes life with his father living in an airport undetected and how they meet their basic needs. The story presents both a child and father's emotional responses to homelessness. The book provides an example of how homeless families try to survive and meet basic needs as well as a unique sense of community built in challenging circumstances.

3. Sam and the Lucky Money by Karen Chinn (compassion, kindness)
New York: Lee & Low Books Inc., 1995

Sam wants to spend his Chinese New Year money gift but after looking at many expensive or unnecessary items, he chooses instead to give it to a homeless man in need of shoes. Since it is a small amount, Sam tells the man it might not be enough for him to buy shoes but it might buy him some warm socks. This book illustrates a child's natural desire to consume but also how his decision to make small financial contribution can make a big difference for a homeless man.

4. The Rag Coat by Lauren Mills (community, happiness)
Little, Brown and Company, 1991

The story provides insight into the conditions of North American poverty that would prevent a child from attending school. This is the story of a girl in the Appalachian Mountains who did not initially attend school because her family needed to make money to survive. She eventually is able to attend but does not have a coat to wear. Women in the community work together to sew one with left over pieces of cloth but the little girl is mocked by her new classmates. This book provides an opportunity to explore multiple points of view, perspective and the tendency for people to misjudge those who live in poverty.

5. The Lady in the Box by Ann McGovern (compassion)
New York: Turtle Books, 1997

Two sisters discover a homeless woman living near their home in the winter. They are concerned about her ability to survive the cold winter so they secretly take items from their home to give to her. They finally tell their mother who joins their effort and they all befriend the woman. The
