Social Scientists Meet The Media:

Social Scientists Meet the Media Cheryl Haslam, Alan Bryman, 1994 Social Scientists Meet the Media collects the experiences of academics who have sought to publicize their research. It contains accounts from social scientists and representatives from radio television and the press. Social Scientists Meet the Media Alan Bryman, Cheryl Haslam, 2013-01-11 Part chronicle part analysis and part advice manual Social Scientists Meets the Media combines the thoughts of academics and media people to produce a vivid and valuable series of accounts that will prove of service to all academics seeking a wider audience but wary of the terra incognita they face in finding one. Ellis Cashmore, Staffordshire University. Social Scientists know they are in a dilemma: their work may fall prey to sensationalism but at the same time they don't want to be overlooked. Social Scientists Meet the Media collects the experiences of academics who have sought to publicize their research. It contains personal accounts from social scientists with extensive media contact and representatives from radio television and the press. Based on these often humorous and sometimes chastening accounts, the editors suggest ways to achieve a more fruitful relationship between social scientists and the media. Media Bias in Reporting Social Research? Martyn Hammersley, 2007-01-24 In recent years the importance of disseminating the findings of social research has been given increased emphasis. The most effective way in which this can be done is via the mass media. However, there are frequent complaints that media coverage of social and educational research is very limited and often distorted. Through a detailed analysis of a particular case about ethnic inequalities in educational achievement, this book examines some of the processes involved in the reporting of research findings and their implications for judgements about media distortion and bias. This volume is relevant to many fields including education, media studies, cultural studies, sociology, and social policy.

Reporting of Social Science in the National Media Carol Weiss, Eleanor Singer, 1988-08-04 Policy makers as well as the general public are often unaware of social science research until a story about it appears in the national media. Even in official Washington, a staffer's report on social research may go unnoticed while a report in the Washington Post receives immediate attention. This study takes a systematic and revealing look at social science reporting. How do journalists hear about social science and why do they select certain stories to cover and not others? How do journalistic standards for selection compare with social scientists' own judgments of merit? How do reporters attempt to ensure accuracy and how freely do they introduce their own interpretations of social science findings? How satisfied are social scientists with the selection and accuracy of social science news? In Part I, Carol H. Weiss addresses these questions on the basis of personal interviews with social scientists and the journalists who wrote about their work. Part II by Eleanor Singer is based on an analysis of media content itself and compares social science reporting over time between 1970 and 1982 and across media: newspapers, newsmagazines, television. These two complementary perspectives combine to produce a thorough, realistic assessment of the way social science moves out of the academy and into the world of news. Media Anthropology Eric W.

Meet Media Literacy Jim Wasserman, 2019-06-18 High school students today are no longer insulated from the vicissitudes of messaging counter messaging in today's always available always blaring media coming into their cars homes and ears through ever more personal devices including the cross accusations of fake news that leave true seekers of information spinning in circles Young people are no longer future consumers as products they are not even old enough to buy are pitched to them while groups with political agendas seek to make future voters already on their team before they first step into a voting booth Fortunately there is now a call for empowering teens with the knowledge and skills to decode such messaging so that they are no longer passive receptacles of messaging but active participants in their own media processing This is the field of media literacy

Encyclopedia of Science and Technology Communication Susanna Hornig Priest,2010-07-14 The explosion of scientific information is exacerbating the information gap between richer poorer educated less educated publics The proliferation of media technology and the popularity of the Internet help some keep up with these developments but also make it more likely others fall further behind This is taking place in a globalizing economy and society that further complicates the division between information haves and have nots and compounds the challenge of communicating about emerging science and technology to increasingly diverse audiences Journalism about science and technology must fill this gap yet journalists and journalism students themselves struggle to keep abreast of contemporary scientific developments Scientist aided by public relations and public information professionals must get their stories out not only to other scientists but also to broader public audiences Funding agencies increasingly expect their grantees to engage in outreach and education and such activity can be seen as both a survival strategy and an ethical imperative for taxpayer supported university based research Science communication often in new forms must expand to meet all these needs Providing a comprehensive introduction to students professionals and scholars in this area is a unique challenge because practitioners in these fields must grasp both the principles of science and the principles of science communication while understanding the social contexts of each For this reason science journalism and science communication are often addressed only in advanced undergraduate or graduate specialty courses rather than covered exhaustively in lower division courses Even so those entering the field rarely will have a comprehensive background in both science and communication studies This circumstance underscores the importance of compiling useful reference materials The Encyclopedia of Science and Technology Communication presents resources and strategies for science communicators including theoretical material and background on recent controversies and key institutional actors and sources Science communicators need to understand more than how to interpret scientific facts and conclusions they need to understand basic elements of the politics sociology and philosophy of science as well as relevant media and communication theory principles of risk communication new trends and how to evaluate the effectiveness of science communication programmes to mention just a few of the major challenges This work will help to develop and enhance such understanding as it addresses these challenges and more Topics covered include advocacy policy and research organizations environmental and health communication philosophy of science media theory and science communication informal science education science journalism as a profession risk communication theory public understanding of science pseudo science in the news special problems in reporting science and technology science communication ethics The Psychologist ,1994 Media, Culture and Society in Putin's Russia S.

Sieber, 2012-12-06 Social scientists are unprepared for many of the ethical problems that arise in their research and for criticisms of their ethics that seem to ignore such cherished scientific values as objectivity and freedom of inquiry Yet they possess method ological talent and insight into human nature that can be used to understand and resolve these problems The contributors to this book demonstrate that criticism of the ethics of social research can stimulate constructive development of meth odology Both volumes of The Ethics of Social Research were written for and by social scientists to show how ethical dilemmas arise in the day to day conduct of social research and how they can be resolved The topics discussed in the companion volume include ethical problems that arise in experiments and sample surveys this book deals with the ethical issues involved in fieldwork and in the regulation and publication of research With candor and humor many of the contributors describe lessons they have learned about themselves their methods and their research participants Collectively they illustrate that both humanists and determinists are likely to encounter ethical dilemmas in their research albeit different ones and that a blending of deterministic and humanistic approaches may be needed to solve these dilemmas The aim of this book is to assist investigators in preparing to meet some of the ethical problems that await the unwary It offers perspectives values and guidelines for anticipating problems and devising solutions Media Power, Professionals and Policies Howard
