The European City and Green Space Peter Clark,2016-12-05 Recent years have seen sustained public debate and controversy over the greening of European cities associated with the environmental movement pressures of urban redevelopment and the promotional strategies of cities competing in a global market But the European debate over urban green space has a long history dating back to Victorian concerns for the green lungs of the city to combat the health and social problems caused by rapid population and industrial growth This book explores the multiplicity of green space developments in the modern city ranging over parks and commons garden suburbs and the cities in the park allotment gardens green belts and national urban parks It is concerned not only with the different types of green space but the many influences shaping their evolution from international planning ideas to the rise of modern day sport and leisure and the effects of the transport revolution No less vital in this story is the interaction of the many actors involved in the often fractious political process of creating green spaces architects and planners politicians developers and other businessmen NGOs and local residents This volume is particularly concerned with contexts how international planning ideas are transmitted and adapted in different European cities how the construction of green space is affected by local power structures and relationships and how ordinary people perceive and use green spaces quite often at variance with official designs The European City and Green Space looks at these and other issues through the prism of four metropolises London Stockholm Helsinki and St Petersburg All represent different types of North European city yet each has experienced distinctive economic political and cultural trajectories whilst also facing powerful challenges and problems of similar kinds with regard to green space This volume examines how each has responded to them and what patterns emerge The Feel of the City Nicolas Kenny, 2014-06-09 At the start of the twentieth century the modern metropolis was a riot of sensation City dwellers lived in an environment filled with smoky factories crowded homes and lively thoroughfares Sights sounds and smells flooded their senses while changing conceptions of health and decorum forced many to rethink their most banal gestures from the way they negotiated speeding traffic to the use they made of public washrooms The Feel of the City exposes the sensory experiences of city dwellers in Montreal and Brussels at the turn of the century and the ways in which these shaped the social and cultural significance of urban space Using the experiences of municipal officials urban planners hygienists workers writers artists and ordinary citizens Nicolas Kenny explores the implications of the senses for our understanding of modernity European Cities in the Modern Era, 1850-1914 Friedrich Lenger, 2012-08-17 In European Cities in the Modern Era 1850 1914 Friedrich Lenger analyses the demographic and economic preconditions of European urbanization compares the extent to which Europe's cities were characterized by heterogeneity with respect to the social national and religious composition of its population and asks in which way differences resulting from this heterogeneity were resolved either peacefully or violently Using this general perspective and extending the scope by including Eastern and Southern Europe the dominant view of Europe's prewar cities as islands of modernity is challenged and the ubiquity of urban violence established as a central analytical problem
