Mexico's Community Forest Enterprises David Barton Bray, 2020-11-24 The road to sustainable forest management and stewardship has been debated for decades Some advocate for governmental control and oversight Some say that the only way to stem the tide of deforestation is to place as many tracts as possible under strict protection Caught in the middle of this debate forest inhabitants of the developing world struggle to balance the extraction of precarious livelihoods from forests while responding to increasing pressures from national governments international institutions and their own perceptions of environmental decline to protect biodiversity restore forests and mitigate climate change Mexico presents a unique case in which much of the nation's forests were placed as commons in the hands of communities who with state support and their own entrepreneurial vigor created community forest enterprises CFEs David Barton Bray who has spent more than thirty years engaged with and researching Mexican community forestry shows that this reform has transformed forest management in that country at a scale and level of maturity unmatched anywhere else in the world For decades Mexico has been conducting a de facto large scale experiment in the design of a national social ecological system SES focused on community forests What happens when you give subsistence communities rights over forests as well as training organizational support equipment and financial capital Do the communities destroy the forest in the name of economic development or do they manage them sustainably generating current income while maintaining intergenerational value as a resource for their children Bray shares the scientific and social evidence that can now begin to answer these questions This is an invaluable resource for students researchers and the interested public on the future of global forest resilience and the possibilities for a good Anthropocene

Community Action for Conservation Luciana Porter-Bolland, Isabel Ruiz-Mallén, Claudia Camacho-Benavides, Susannah R. McCandless, 2013-08-20 This book provides an in depth analysis on community conservation in Mexico The volume explores vivid examples and case studies that illustrate some of the critical issues at stake including the participation of local communities in national and global conservation indigenous and local perceptions of conservation initiatives in Southern Mexico and challenges in ICCA governance and ecotourism The book also reviews methodological approaches for understanding and strengthening community conservation touching upon such topics as community based biodiversity monitoring and tools for understanding children's perceptions of community conservation Written by international experts in the field Community Action for Conservation Mexican Experiences is a lively and deep running resource that offers invaluable stories and analyses of the Mexican experience with conservation

Environmental Governance in Latin America Fabio De Castro, Barbara Hogenboom, Michiel Baud, 2016-03-24 This book is open access under a CC BY license The multiple purposes of nature livelihood for communities revenues for states commodities for companies and biodiversity for conservationists have turned environmental governance in Latin America into a highly contested arena In such a resource rich region unequal power relations conflicting priorities and trade offs among multiple goals have led to a myriad of contrasting initiatives that are reshaping social relations and rural territories This edited collection addresses these tensions by unpacking environmental governance as a complex process of formulating and contesting values procedures and practices shaping the access control and use of natural resources Contributors from various fields address the challenges limitations and possibilities for a more sustainable equal and fair development In this book environmental governance is seen as an overarching concept defining the dynamic and multi layered repertoire of society nature interactions where images of nature and discourses on the use of natural resources are mediated by contextual processes at multiple scales

REDD, Forest Governance and Rural Livelihoods Oliver

Springate-Baginski,Eva Wollenberg,2010-01-01 Experiences from incentive based forest management are examined for their effects on the livelihoods of local communities In the second section country case studies provide a snapshot of REDD developments to date and identify design features for REDD that would support benefits for forest communities

Forests as Complex Social and Ecological Systems Patrick J. Baker,David R. Larsen,Alark Saxena,2022-05-17 Professor Chadwick Dearing Oliver has made major intellectual contributions to forest science and natural resources management Over the course of his career he has actively sought to bring research and practice together through synthesis outreach and capacity building A common thread throughout his career has been complexity and how we as a society understand and manage complex systems His work on forest stand dynamics landscape management and sustainability have all focused on the emergent properties of complex ecological and or social systems This volume celebrates a remarkable career through a diverse group of former students and colleagues who work on a wide range of subject areas related to the management of complex natural resource systems Over the past decade there has been considerable discussion about forests as complex adaptive systems Advances in remote sensing social methods and data collection and processing have enabled more detailed characterisations of complex natural systems across spatial and temporal scales than ever before Making sense of these data however requires conceptual frameworks that are robust to the complexity of the systems and their inherent dynamics particularly in the context of global change This volume presents a collection of cutting edge research on natural ecosystems and their dynamics through the lens of complex adaptive systems It includes contributions by a wide range of authors from academia NGOs forest industry and governmental organisations with diverse perspectives on forests and natural resources management Each chapter offers new insights into how these systems can be made more resilient to ensure that they provide a diversity of ecological and social values well into the future Together they provide a robust way of thinking about the many challenges that natural ecosystems face and how we as society may best address them

Biodiversity Loss and Conservation in Fragmented Forest Landscapes Adrian C. Newton,2007-01-01 Based on a field research on the changing montane and temperate rainforests of Mexico and South America By concentrating on these largely overlooked environments this work allows for comparative analysis across areas and helps identify how human disturbance has impacted the biodiversity of all forest types Forests for People Anne M Larson, Deborah Barry, Ganga Ram Dahal, 2012-09-10 Who has rights to forests and forest resources In recent years governments in the South have transferred at least 200 million hectares of forests to communities living in and around them This book assesses the experience of what appears to be a new international trend that has substantially increased the share of the world's forests under community administration Based on research in over 30 communities in selected countries in Asia India Nepal Philippines Laos Indonesia Africa Burkina Faso Cameroon Ghana and Latin America Bolivia Brazil Guatemala Nicaragua it examines the process and outcomes of granting new rights assessing a variety of governance issues in implementation access to forest products and markets and outcomes for people and forests Forest tenure reforms have been highly varied ranging from the titling of indigenous territories to the granting of small land areas for forest regeneration or the right to a share in timber revenues While in many cases these rights have been significant new statutory rights do not automatically result in rights in practice and a variety of institutional weaknesses and policy distortions have limited the impacts of change Through the comparison of selected cases the chapters explore the nature of forest reform the extent and meaning of rights transferred or recognized and the role of authority and citizens networks in forest governance They also assess opportunities and obstacles associated with government regulations and markets for forest products and the effects across the cases on livelihoods forest condition and equity Published with CIFOR Democracy in the Woods Prakash Kashwan, 2017 Democracy in the Woods examines the trajectories of forest and land rights in India Tanzania and Mexico to explain how societies negotiate the tensions between environmental protection and social justice It shows that the social consequences of environmental protection depend almost entirely on political intermediation of competing claims to environmental resources
