along with the derivative relationships between Indian and Asian Buddhist monuments. It also discusses the historical antecedents in the Indus Civilization and the religious and philosophical foundations of the three schools of Buddhism and its founder Buddha. Previously obscure topics such as Aniconic and Vajrayana Tantric architecture and the four holiest sites of Buddhism will also be covered in this comprehensive volume. The author further investigates the influences of Buddhist architecture upon Islamic, Christian and Hindu architecture that have been overlooked by past scholars. Early Interactions Between South and Southeast Asia Pierre-Yves Manguin, A. Mani, Geoff Wade, 2011. This book takes stock of the results of some two decades of intensive archaeological research carried out on both sides of the Bay of Bengal in combination with renewed approaches to textual sources and to art history. To improve our understanding of the trans-cultural process commonly referred to as Indianisation, it brings together specialists of both India and Southeast Asia in a fertile inter-disciplinary confrontation. Most of the essays reappraise the millennium-long historiographic no-man's-land during which exchanges between the two shores of the Bay of Bengal led, among other processes, to the Indianisation of those parts of the region that straddled the main routes of exchange. Some essays follow up these processes into better-known classical times or even into modern times, showing that the localisation process of Indian themes has long remained at work, allowing local societies to produce their own social space and express their own ethos. Việt Nam Heidi Tan, Asian Civilisations Museum (Singapore), 2008. This collection focuses on one of Asia's fastest growing economies, Vietnam, from its mythical origins to the rising economic power it has become today. Readers will be able to explore Vietnam's unique cultural identity as seen in the diverse material cultures that developed over the past 2,500 years. This rich legacy is the result of different cultural influences which were absorbed and adapted. The advanced bronze technology of the Dong Son culture of northern Vietnam, some 2,500 years ago, shared similarities with Chinese traditions and was also exported to other parts of Southeast Asia. The Viet culture of the northern Red River region was heavily influenced by China during the first 1,000 years of the common era when the region was under Chinese rule. In central Vietnam, the Hindu-Buddhist kingdom of Champa left an important legacy of temples and sculpture inspired by Indian traditions. In the highlands and other remote areas, tribal communities involved in cross-border trade also engaged in the process of cross-cultural adaptation. This book showcases important pieces from national museums around Vietnam, including archaeological materials, sculpture, textiles and ethnographic objects. Beneath the Winds James Bennett, Art Gallery of South Australia, 2011.
