Heller,Nancy W. Sindelar,1991 School districts considering a mentoring program need to consider four things 1 the reasons for a teacher mentor program 2 how to start such a program 3 administrative support needed for a successful program and 4 pitfalls to avoid The reasons for having a mentor program are that it benefits the new teacher the mentor and the school The new teacher s opportunities to exchange views with an experienced teacher is a distinct benefit to him her The mentor benefits also however because of the opportunity to share views experiences and strategies The improved teaching that usually results is an asset to the school Starting a program involves six stages establishing a rationale setting criteria for the selection of mentors defining roles inviting the mentors training the mentors and evaluating the program To be successful the program must have administrative support from the board of education the superintendent the central office staff the teacher union and the principal As with any new program anticipating problems can help to avoid them Some pitfalls are overdependence on the part of the protege ego problems on the part of the mentor and the evaluation dilemma arising from the mentor s dual role of confidant and evaluator Mentorship programs promote professionalism by providing continuous staff development during the first year of teaching AMH

Learning Strategies for Problem Learners Thomas P. Lombardi, 1992 This pamphlet offers guidelines for educators who want to improve their use of strategy instruction with students who have inefficient and or ineffective learning strategies

Specific examples of strategic teaching are provided for improving general and academic performance and suggestions are given on how to create a strategic environment consistent with strategic teaching. The pamphlet begins with an outline of the steps in acquiring a learning strategy. It then discusses strategies for improving general performance including strategies in the areas of organization, time management, memory, test taking, social skills, speech, and handwriting. Strategies for improving academic performance in the areas of reading and writing, spelling, mathematics, and other content areas are then described. Suggestions for creating a supportive environment for strategy learning in the home and school are provided. Guidelines for teaching strategically are noted such as use of advanced organizers, brainstorming, motivating and activating students, modeling, providing feedback, and use of post organizers. The Portfolio Approach to Assessment Emily Grady, 1992. The shortcomings of standardized testing as the predominant form of student assessment in the United States are reviewed and the use and potential benefits of portfolio assessment are explored. Children's educational experiences and their future job prospects and standards of living are being decided by test scores. Moreover, these test scores may be unfair or biased against some students. Instead of more tests, we need a new attitude toward assessment, one that encourages a variety of assessments. Portfolio assessment through collections of student works can be an encompassing format for this new philosophy. Before considering what a portfolio should contain, it is important to establish the purpose of the assessment. The experiences of Vermont illustrate the development of a portfolio assessment with consistent standards. Examples of guidelines for mathematics and language arts portfolios make it clear that it is possible to establish consistent practices. It is also necessary to reflect on the portfolio occasionally using self-evaluations and direct questions or profiles. Educators also find portfolios useful tools for preservice teachers. Portfolio assessment can be the framework for a new curricular structure that integrates assessment into the learning loop. SLD

Effective Communication for District and School Administrators Theodore J. Kowalski, 2015-08-20. The book is a unique and necessary contribution to the literature on school administration. Research, theory, and practice were melded to produce a book that can be used as a primary or supplemental text or as a professional growth resource for practitioners. Communication scholars, especially since 1990, have concluded that competence must be defined and studied in the context of professions. As such, a growing number of medical schools, law schools, and business schools have integrated communication into their curricula. This book provides a resource for such integration into the study and practice of district and school administration.

Implementing the Disabilities Acts Patricia F. First, Joan L. Curcio, 1993. This booklet presents information helpful in implementing laws intended to extend full societal participation to individuals with disabilities. Information concerning the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act of 1990 (IDEA) addresses the law's major provisions, provisions for medically fragile children, amendments, and modifications, and case law related to least restrictive environment. A discussion of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 reviews major provisions, specific titles, enforcement, and remedies, and the impact on schools. Section 504 of the

Rehabilitation Act of 1973 is also briefly described focusing on its impact on schools The pamphlet concludes that schools and school districts that have a commitment to inclusive education for all children will have no difficulty in complying with the requirements of these three laws JDD Resources for School Leaders Debra Grieb,1991 The Need for Work
