Wildlife Assassins Nora Franklin, AI, 2025-02-12 Wildlife Assassins explores the diverse strategies predators use to survive in the natural world making it an engaging read for those interested in science biology and nature The book delves into the science behind successful predation highlighting ambush tactics the physics of speed and the art of stealth One intriguing fact is how some predators have evolved specialized sensory organs like infrared pits in pit vipers to detect prey Another focus is on biomechanics which explains how cheetahs use their unique body structure to achieve incredible speeds while hunting The book takes a mechanistic approach dissecting the skills that culminate in hunting proficiency examining not just what predators do but how and why It links biology with physics and engineering showing how these disciplines intersect in the realm of predation and nature The book progresses logically introducing core concepts analyzing specific predator prey systems and discussing the broader implications for ecosystem health and conservation Special consideration is given to the environmental and anthropogenic factors challenging predator populations today

Cattle, Their Predators and Geomatics Research Michael O'Neal Campbell, 2025-08-06 Cattle are currently the most important domesticated mammals with populations numbering in the hundreds of millions and occupying large tracts of land while the conservation of large mammalian carnivores is becoming a dominant discourse in modern geopolitics also claiming large portions of the Earth s land surface Computer based surveying and communication systems including geomatics Big Data and Big Tech are becoming an essential part of human communication and environmental assessments and are critical to large scale assessments of land conflicts A current critical potent but neglected issue concerns the measurement of the interfaces of large carnivore and cattle ecologies in a cross continental format This book offers a novel approach to the interfaces of the sciences of conservation biology animal ecology agricultural development and geomatics

which are increasingly interconnected in modern global development scenarios For animal ecology and conservation biology it is about the management systems that have developed from ecological and human parameters For agricultural development topics concern ancestral development physiological characteristics ecological requirements and predation opportunities and conflicts of cattle breeds For geomatics the topics concern the image based and survey based technologies that enable more critical environmental assessments The book takes a novel approach by examining the ancestry of cattle including the aurochs and current wild buffalos gaur banteng yaks bison the process of domestication into taurine and indicine cattle the semi domestication of yaks and water buffalo the ecologies of ancestral and modern large carnivores including bears big cats and canids and how the requirements of these large charismatic mammals conflict with the requirements of cattle and agricultural development in Asia Europe Africa North America and South America This integrative approach contributes to the interests of academic researchers students practitioners and policy makers and general readers
