of ecological catastrophe But the environmental emergency is also a crisis for our philosophical habits of thought confronting us with a problem that seems to defy not only our control but also our understanding Global warming is perhaps the most dramatic example of what Timothy Morton calls hyperobjects entities of such vast temporal and spatial dimensions that they defeat traditional ideas about what a thing is in the first place In this book Morton explains what hyperobjects are and their impact on how we think how we coexist with one another and with nonhumans and how we experience our politics ethics and art Moving fluidly between philosophy science literature visual and conceptual art and popular culture the book argues that hyperobjects show that the end of the world has already occurred in the sense that concepts such as world nature and even environment are no longer a meaningful horizon against which human events take place Instead of inhabiting a world we find ourselves inside a number of hyperobjects such as climate nuclear weapons evolution or relativity Such objects put unbearable strains on our normal ways of reasoning Insisting that we have to reinvent how we think to even begin to comprehend the world we now live in Hyperobjects takes the first steps outlining a genuinely postmodern ecological approach to thought and action

Adolescence and Adulthood Leo Hendry, Marion Kloep, 2012-02-13 From the teenage years to retirement each phase of life presents different challenges and new experiences Examining the patterns of development throughout the lifespan the authors provide key insights into how we experience the world and they examine how established theories have been challenged by recent changes to the understanding of human development Whatever your level of study this absorbing introduction will give you a deeper appreciation of the different life phases and how psychological principles aid our understanding of them

The Ant Trap Brian Epstein, 2015-03-03 We live in a world of crowds and corporations artworks and artifacts legislatures and languages money and markets These are all social objects they are made at least in part by people and by communities But what exactly are these things How are they made and what is the role of people in making them In The Ant Trap Brian Epstein rewrites our understanding of the nature of the social world and the foundations of the social sciences Epstein explains and challenges the three prevailing traditions about how the social world is made One tradition takes the social world to be built out of people much as traffic is built out of cars A second tradition also takes people to be the building blocks of the social world but focuses on thoughts and attitudes we have toward one another And a third tradition takes the social world to be a collective projection onto the physical world Epstein shows that these share critical flaws Most fundamentally all three traditions overestimate the role of people in building the social world they are overly anthropocentric Epstein starts from scratch bringing the resources of contemporary metaphysics to bear In the place of traditional theories he introduces a model based on a new distinction between the grounds and the anchors of social facts Epstein illustrates the model with a study of the nature of law and shows how to interpret the prevailing traditions about the social world Then he turns to social groups and to what it means for a group to take an action or have an intention Contrary to the overwhelming consensus these often depend on more than the actions and intentions of group members
