Regulating Telecommunications in South Africa Charley Lewis, 2020-06-10 This book provides the first full account of the 20 year story of universal access and service in South Africa's ICT sector From 1994 the country's first democratic government set out to redress the deep digital divide afflicting the overwhelming majority of its citizens already poor and disenfranchised but likewise marginalised in access to telephone infrastructure and services By this time an incipient global policy regime was driving reforms in the telecomms sector and also developing good practice models for universal service Policy diffusion thus led South Africa to adopt adapt and implement a slew of these interventions In particular roll out obligations were imposed on licensees and a universal service fund was established But an agency with a universal service mandate was also created and licences in under serviced areas were awarded The book goes on to identify and analyse the policy success and failure of each of these interventions and suggests some lessons to be learned

Funding and Implementing Universal Access Uganda Communications Commission, 2005 Uganda was one of the first countries in Africa to develop a policy on universal access to information and communication technologies ICTs and to implement a universal access fund designed to support initiatives aimed at improving poor and rural populations access to ICTs Today Uganda's universal access policy and rural communications development fund are generally seen as best practice This book presents the Ugandan experience OCo an experience that was unique because of the country's early liberalization of the communication sector and explosion in the use of mobile communication technology Regulators policy advisors and government officials both within and outside Africa will find this book useful as they develop their own policies strategies and implementation plans for universal access
