Telecommunications Development The Case Of Africa:

Telecommunications Development L. Kwabena Riverson, 1993 This book examines the formulation of telecommunications in Africa with explanations on how telecommunications affects economic development In Africa the Pan African Telecommunications Network PANAFTTEL is analyzed vis a vis its infrastructural programs to support the goals and objectives of the African economic development plan The author's study was shaped by questions concerning the current state of African telecommunications development and the need to assess the role of PANAFTTEL provision of telecommunications services designed to meet the defined African economic objectives The historical maturation of PANAFTTEL and its four sub regional networks PANAFTTEL North PANAFTTEL West ECOWAS network PANAFTTEL Central and PANAFTTEL South SADCC network are examined as well For each sub region there is a descriptive analysis of the infrastructure technology operation and other associated developmental factors On the future direction of telecommunications development in Africa the author sheds light on the emergence of the Regional African Satellite Communication System RASCOM which could revolutionize African telecommunications Furthermore the author makes recommendations for adding African telecommunications advancement including the establishment of a Pan African Telecommunications Academy and the establishment of a fund to support PANAFTTEL initiatives by the developed member countries of the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization

Telecommunications and Development in Africa B. A. Kiplagat, Marcel C. M. Werner, 1994 This publication views Africa in a global perspective in economic regulatory and technological terms Arguments are offered for ensuring that Africa keeps pace with global technology as the rest of the world is gearing towards multimedia communications and the associated productivity gains Telecommunications in Africa

Eli M. Noam, 1999 A modern telecommunications network is an essential infrastructure for the world's developing nations The emergence of new technologies the entrance of supra national carriers and deregulation in the telecommunications sector have resulted in the globalization of telecommunications and the opening of markets on every continent Collecting the work of 19 expert contributors this book provides a comprehensive examination of what African countries are doing to build their telecommunications capabilities Africa has historically lagged behind other regions in developing its telecommunications infrastructure and the penetration rate for basic service is still relatively low But as some African nations undergo restructuring they have begun to open their networks to foreign investors and regional cooperative ventures to expand basic and advanced telecommunications services The contributors discuss the uneven pace of economic regulatory and social change among African nations as state telecommunications monopolies maintain their hold in some countries and give way to privatization in others Analyzing the political and economic changes of the 1990s the contributors provide clues about how Africa can shake off decades of inertia and prepare to take part in the global information economy Edited by an internationally recognized authority on telecommunications this volume is the latest in a series that surveys telecommunications in the major regions of the world Thorough and accessible it is a valuable resource for students and scholars in the areas of communications economics regulatory law telecommunications engineering and African studies as well as telecommunications professionals and policy makers

Telecommunications Development in Africa Lantiri Kwabena Riverson,1991 Information and communication technologies for development and poverty reduction Maximo Torero,Joachim von Braun,2006-01-01 The IT revolution made some glorious promises to the world s poor instant access to information and far flung markets political empowerment greater growth even the possibility that countries could leapfrog entire stages of development But when none of that happened in a hurry the hoopla gave way to concern that rather than closing the wealth gap IT was exacerbating it Yet for all the international debate and millions of words written about the digital divide very little systematic empirical research or studies over time have been done to confirm claims and counterclaims and to guide policymakers on how this technology actually affects the development of low income countries In this volume Maximo Torero and Joachim von Braun seek to address this omission with a collection of case studies exploring the relationship between information and communication technologies ICTs and development in Bangladesh China India Ghana Laos Peru and East Africa Their conclusion is that yes ICTs do have potential to serve and empower the poor by linking them to commercial and social networks cutting transaction costs and making the delivery of public goods like education and healthcare more efficient But these benefits can accrue only when the supporting infrastructure is in place and when ICT policies take into account not only questions of connectivity but also of capability how to help poor people use the new tools and of content what is relevant and in what form All three c s are critical Without coherent strategies and the right regulatory policies there is the very real likelihood that scarce resources will be misallocated and that ICT induced growth will remain elusive Contributors Abdul Bayes Arjun Bedi Romeo Bertolini Shyamal K Chowdhury Virgilio Galdo K Lal Francis A S T Matambalya Maja Micevska Dietrich Mueller Falcke Gi Soon Song Maximo Torero Joachim von Braun Wensheng Wang and Susanna Wolfe Gi Soon Song Maximo Torero Joachim von Braun Wensheng Wang Susanna Wolf

The Liberalisation of the Telecommunications Sector in Sub-Saharan Africa and Fostering Competition in Telecommunications Services Markets Rachel Alemu,2018-02-02 This study investigates whether the existing regulatory framework governing the telecommunications sector in countries in Sub Saharan Africa effectively deals with emerging competition related concerns in the liberalised sector Using Uganda as a case study it analyses the relevant provisions of the law governing competition in the telecommunications sector and presents three key findings Firstly while there is comprehensive legislation on interconnection and spectrum management inefficient enforcement of the legislation has perpetuated concerns surrounding spectrum scarcity and interconnection Secondly the legislative framework governing anti competitive behaviour though in line with the established principles of competition law is not sufficient Specifically the framework is not equipped to govern the conduct of multinational telecommunications groups that have a strong presence in the telecommunications sector Major factors hampering efficient competition regulation include Uganda's sole reliance on sector specific competition rules restricted available remedies and a regulator with limited experience of enforcing competition legislation The weaknesses in the framework strongly suggest the need to adopt an economy wide competition law Lastly wireless technology is the main means through which the population in Uganda accesses telecommunications services Greater emphasis should be placed on regulating conduct in the wireless communications markets Advanced Topics in Global Information Management, Volume 2 Tan, Felix B.,2002-07-01 Annotation Advanced Topics in Global Information Management Volume 3 is the third in a series of books on advance topics in global information management GIM GIM research continues to progress with some scholars pushing the boundaries of thinking and others challenging the status quo

Re-imagining Development Communication in Africa Chuka Onwumechili,Ikechukwu Ndolo,2013 Re imagining Development Communication in Africa is organized into three sections or parts the first focusing on the past and the history of development communication scholarship the second analyzes theoretical issues and finally a third section that looks at country cases The first part provides several perspectives on the historical development of the field as it pertains to Africa Some of these look at ideological indigenous contributions and the particular importance of gender issues The second section provides a critique of development communication theory and provides a more cultural appropriate alternative Additionally the book applies existing theory to practice in African communities This leads to the third section of the book which focuses on development communication in some country cases such as in Cameroon Kenya Nigeria and Rwanda

Reform, Organizational Players, and Technological Developments in African Telecommunications Chuka Onwumechili,2003 This work provides information in the field of African telecommunications policy and access It includes information on a range of topics including the growth of wireless telephones and documentation of bilateral and multilateral participation in African telecommunications development
