Bělohlávek,Prof. JUDr. Naděžda Rozehnalova,2012-04-01 Following the first volume of the Czech Central European Yearbook of Arbitration CYArb the second volume of CYArb thematically concurs that the points of friction between arbitration as an alternative dispute resolution mechanism are the freedom parties have in setting up the methods and mechanisms for the dispute settlement and the state organized court proceedings with its obligatory jurisdiction and strict rules The state organized court proceedings guarantee the firm borders and equality of means regarding the protection of the fundamental rights of the parties during the proceedings The primary focus of CYArb is the issue of autonomy throughout the arbitration process The principle of autonomy represents the backbone of arbitration as the ADR mechanism It provides to the parties the necessary freedom to stipulate the adequate method for the solution of the dispute On the other hand the autonomous approach of the parties creates an informal relationship among the subjects involved in dispute resolution The informality provides room for the autonomy of the arbitrators or that of the arbitral tribunal be it in ad hoc or institutional proceedings on how to advance the dispute The CYArb project aims to highlight the potential pitfalls of each of the categories of the autonomous parties present during the various types of arbitral proceedings in order to analyze the role of autonomy as a leading principle in the ADR mechanisms in its mutual interaction The topic therefore provides a wide spectrum of interesting issues to be addressed from the practice and academic points of view particularly with regard to the comparison
