The Palgrave Handbook of African Political Economy Samuel Ojo Oloruntoba,Toyin Falola,2020-06-23 This handbook constitutes a specialist single compendium that analyses African political economy in its theoretical historical and policy dimensions It emphasizes the uniqueness of African political economy within a global capitalist system that is ever changing and complex Chapters in the book discuss how domestic and international political economic forces have shaped and continue to shape development outcomes on the continent Contributors also provoke new thinking on theories and policies to better position the continent's economy to be a critical global force The uniqueness of the handbook lies in linking theory and praxis with the past future and various dimensions of the political economy of Africa

Statistical Tragedy in Africa? Morten Jerven,Deborah Johnston,2017-10-02 What do we know about economic development in Africa The answer is that we know much less than we would like to think This collection assesses the knowledge problem present in statistics on poverty agriculture labour education health and economic growth While diverse in origin the contributors to this book are unified in two conclusions the quality and quantity of data needs to be improved and this is a concern not just for statisticians Weaknesses in statistical methodology and practice can misinform policy makers international agencies donors the private sector and the citizens of African countries themselves This is also a problem for academics from various disciplines from history and economics to social epidemiology and education policy Not only does academic work on Africa regularly use flawed data but many problems encountered in surveys challenge common academic abstractions By exploring these flaws this book will provide a guide for scholars policy makers and all those using and commissioning surveys in Africa This book was originally published as a special issue of The Journal of Development

Studies Economic Growth and Measurement Reconsidered in Botswana, Kenya, Tanzania, and Zambia, 1965-1995 Morten Jerven, 2014-03-27 How do we measure African economic performance This volume studies how growth is measured in Botswana Kenya Tanzania and Zambia and challenges commonly held beliefs of African economic performance The volume offers a reconsideration of economic growth in Africa in three respects First it shows that the focus has been on average economic growth and that there has been no failure of economic growth In particular the gains made in the 1960s and 1970s have been neglected Second it emphasizes that for many countries the decline in economic growth in the 1980s was overstated as was the improvement in economic growth in the 1990s The coverage of economic activities in GDP measures is incomplete In the 1980s many economic activities were increasingly missed in the official records thus the decline in the 1980s was overestimated resulting from declining coverage and the increase in the 1990s was overestimated resulting from increasing coverage The third important reconsideration is that there is no clear association between economic growth and orthodox economic policies This is counter to the mainstream interpretation and suggests that the importance of sound economic policies has been overstated and that the importance of the external economic conditions have been understated in the prevailing explanation of African economic performance Africa Rising? Ian Taylor, 2014 Africa is said to be rising turning a definitive page in its history heralding new and exciting possibilities for the continent This discourse maintains that with upsurge in economic growth comes improved governance and endogenous dynamics that the emerging economies and especially the BRICS Brazil Russia India China South Africa have been instrumental in diversifying Africa s international relations perhaps leading to a radical change in the global order favourable to the developing world But to what extent is this true and how deep and how broad has been the impact on society at large This book takes a critical look at the prevalent Africa Rising discourse and explores the nature and implications of Africa s rise and the role that the BRICS have played in it The author argues that Africa has still to undergo any structural transformation that there is strong evidence that deindustrialisation and jobless growth have accompanied the upsurge of interest in the continent and that far from making a radical turn in its developmental trajectory Africa is being pushed into the resource corner as commodity exporters to the North and now the BRICS with little scope for industrial progress or skills advancement Hope that the BRICS might offer an alternative to the extant neoliberal order are misplaced for the BRICS have a stake in maintaining the current global inequality Africa must therefore fashion its own independent path while the emerging economies will be important relying on external actors may simply reproduce anew the current state of underdevelopment Ian Taylor is Professor in International Relations and African Politics University of St Andrews Chair Professor Renmin University of China Professor Extraordinary University of Stellenbosch South Africa Honorary Professor Institute of African Studies Zhejiang Normal University China and a Visiting Scholar at Mbarara University of Science and Technology Uganda

Reconfiguration of the Global South Eckart Woertz, 2016-10-04 Since the 1980s there has been a steady shift from

West to East in the international system economically politically and culturally Emerging markets in Asia have moved up the value chain of industrial production processes while the share of Western industrialized countries in global gross domestic product has declined Countries such as China and India are asserting themselves in security matters and seeking new avenues for investment flows and development co operation China s expected shift from export led growth to domestic consumption might further change patterns of trade and capital flows and it is an open debate whether the growth dynamics of India might outstrip those of China While the rise of China and other Asian powers has been studied extensively much less work has been done on how Africa and Latin America position themselves in this process What will the role be of Africa and Latin America in the Asian Century and associated reconfigurations of global value chains Will these regions be able to assert themselves and find a voice of their own Will they manage to develop industries of their own and diversify trade relations Will they launch new ways of regional south south co operation What is the role of migrant communities and cultural exchange Do Western and Asian approaches to these regions differ Washington vs Beijing consensus This book brings together renowned academics from Africa Latin America Europe and the USA who bring refreshing perspectives on an under researched topic ranging from a conceptualization of the issue within new theoretical approaches to unique case studies based on field work

Nigeria Social Science Council of Nigeria, 1987 The Emerging Data Revolution in Africa Ben Kiregyera, 2015-01-01 The book presents a nuanced narrative about statistical development in Africa since around the time of independence when emerging states needed statistics mainly to support their planning processes It highlights challenges faced then some of which have persisted including institutional organizational and technical challenges These challenges manifest themselves in countries with different degrees of severity and are quite severe in post conflict countries Key statistical programmes to support statistical development in Africa in the 1970s 1980s and 1990s are presented Census Catalog and Guide, 1987

Data governance in African health research: ELSI challenges and solutions Donrich Thaldar, Simisola Oluwatoyin

Akintola, Bonginkosi Shoji, 2025-04-02 Data protection legislation is increasingly being enacted in African countries. Additionally, the African Union recently adopted the AU Data Protection Framework. How are these legal and policy developments influencing established ethics notions about data governance in health research? For example, is broad or tiered consent to research participation sufficient, or does new legislation require specific consent? How do individual rights in data interact with communitarian values? Should health research receive special treatment from a data protection regulatory perspective? How should African countries approach AI in healthcare? This research topic aims to identify and analyse ELSI challenges in contemporary data governance in African health research and to develop possible solutions for such challenges. Articles in this research topic will aim to assist policy makers, health researchers, and ELSI practitioners in Africa to better navigate and, where relevant, improve data governance in African health research. Perspective style articles as well as more in-depth research articles are welcome. While articles can analyse fundamental theoretical issues, application-oriented articles and articles that explore lessons learnt in practice are especially encouraged. Authors should address one or more of the following inter-related themes within the research topic of data governance in African health research: 1. Conflicts between new legal and policy developments and established ethics notions; 2. Africanisation, decolonisation, and intra-African rule harmonisation; 3. The evolution of informed consent and the role of trust; 4. The various legal, ethical, and social dimensions or meanings of data and how these dimensions interact; 5. Power and control. This includes individual, institutional, ethnic, community, and national claims to data. It also includes existing and proposed structures of control of data, such as data trusts and data transfer agreements (DTAs); 6. Engagement with data protection regulatory authorities; 7. Artificial intelligence and Big Data.

Kenya Gazette, 1986-06-06 The Kenya Gazette is an official publication of the government of the Republic of Kenya. A Strategy to Develop Agriculture in Sub-Saharan Africa and a Focus for the World Bank Kevin M. Cleaver, 1993-01-01 For 25 years, population growth has outpaced increases in agricultural production in Sub-Saharan Africa. The lack of food and the degradation of agricultural land have forced policymakers to reassess agricultural strategies for the region. This paper provides such a reassessment by identifying policies and investments that have worked and those that have not. The author sets out the common elements required for agricultural and rural development throughout the region. The strategy presented in this paper comprises elements from several development sectors, including transport, water supply, education, finance, and the environment. The author makes five broad recommendations: to promote regional adoption of policies to promote private sector farming and agricultural marketing; processing and credit development; and distribution of new technologies; inclusion of farmers in decisions affecting their livelihood development; infrastructure and social programs in support of agriculture; improved management of natural resources Projections of the likely effects of the proposed policies and investments are included Tables throughout the text present statistics on agricultural growth rates commodity prices and deforestation in the region An annex contains more general tables with information on population growth and fertility rates land use agricultural exports and droughts The strategies suggested in this paper will be of interest to policymakers academics and to development practitioners involved in African agriculture

Innovations as Key to the Green Revolution in Africa Andre Bationo, Boaz Waswa, Jeremiah M. Okeyo, Fredah Maina, Job Maguta Kihara, 2011-08-30 Africa can achieve self sufficiency in food production through adoption of innovations in the agriculture sector Numerous soil fertility and crop production technologies have been generated through research however wide adoption has been low African farmers need better technologies more sustainable practices and fertilizers to improve and sustain their crop productivity and to prevent further degradation of agricultural lands The agricultural sector also needs to be supported by functional institutions and policies that will be able to respond to emerging challenges of globalization and climate change

Building Statistical Capacity in Fragile and Conflict-Affected States Ms. Stephanie C Medina Cas, Stephanie Medina Cas, Yasmin Alem, Jacinta Bernadette Shirakawa, 2022-02-25 Based on internal data this paper finds that the capacity development program of the IMF's Statistics Department has prioritized technical assistance and training to fragile and conflict affected states These interventions have yielded only slightly weaker results in fragile states than in other states However capacity development is constantly needed to make up for the dissipation of progress resulting from insufficient resources that fragile and conflict affected states

allocate to the statistical function inadequate inter agency coordination and the pervasive impact of shocks exogenous to the statistical system Greater coordination with other capacity development providers and within the IMF can help partially overcome low absorptive capacity in fragile states Statistical capacity development is more effective when it is tailored to countries level of fragility
