Suburbanization And The City Conservation Of Human Resources Series:

Suburbanization and the City Thomas M. Stanback, Richard V. Knight, 1976 Suburbanization and the City Thomas M. Stanback (Jr.), Richard V. Knight, 1976 Catalog of Copyright Entries. Third Series Library of Congress. Copyright Office, 1977 The New Suburbanization Penny Peace, Thomas M Stanback Jr, 2019-06-26 In this book fourteen large metropolitan economies are examined to show how industrial composition and jobs have changed in central cities and suburbs since 1970 Driven by the shift in emphasis from goods toward services both central cities and suburbs have undergone dramatic changes The analysis shows that many large central cities have experienced wrenching transformations as a result of low growth or declines in employment and population However these cities have continued to be the focal point of economic activity within the metropolis becoming more narrowly specialized in high level services which have yielded higher average earnings These cities are becoming increasingly dependent on commuting suburbanites for their experienced and educated labor force In the suburbs the cumulative effect of continuous growth since World War II has brought a different sort of transformation The composition of employment has broadened with sharp increases in commuting from areas outside the suburbs Major new centers of business consumer and social services have developed giving rise to agglomeration economies and posing new challenges to the social and economic structure of the central city The book also examines employment opportunities in central cities and in suburbs with special emphasis on jobs for blacks women and young workers Analysis reveals the increasing importance of educational qualifications and the role of part time work and focuses on the problems central city blacks face in gaining employment The prospects for city dwellers seeking suburban jobs are often limited by housing and transportation restrictions The book closes with a critical review of suggested policy alternatives that might increase access to employment for these workers Research and Development Projects United States. Employment and Training Administration, 1976 The Relevance to HUD of Recent Scholarly Research in Urban Economics Stephen J. Carroll, Anthony H. Pascal, Michael N. Caggiano, Rand Corporation, 1979 Sociology , 1975

Survival Strategies George G. Wynne, 1979 This is a most unusual contribution to comparative urban systems It examines Paris and New York in terms of future prospects for each city in the face of draconian social economic and political changes and takes as axiomatic that the struggles of New York and Paris are those of super cities namely struggles to survive as world centers and not just as national metropolitan areas of worth The volume covers such vital areas as planning for older cities like Paris and New York problems in the internal management system of each city the relationship between inner cities and suburbs and issues involved in regional planning in which the two world cities provide models for their nations and the world as a whole The work is unusual in that it not only appraises organizational issues but sociological and architectural ones as well Hence the issue of blacks in New York or Arabs in Paris is addressed with considerable candor and insight The relationship between substandard housing in each of the cities is examined with the clear understanding of the racial dynamics at work in each of these centers This work gives intellectual and practical substance to Gottman s notion of megalopolis and places in sharp comparative relief problems which all too often are seen as local and parochial in character This volume represents the first world cities approach to real world cities and as such is a pioneering effort that will be greeted with great enthusiasm by scholarly and general readers alike The authors gathered for this effort represent leading practitioners from both France and the United States and hence the volume is a joy to read no less than to ponder
