Telecare Technologies and the Transformation of Healthcare N. Oudshoorn, 2011-10-27

Winner of the British Sociological Association Foundation for the Sociology of Health and Illness Book Prize 2012 This book traces the changes in healthcare implicated in telecare technologies information and communication technologies that enable care at a distance What happens when healthcare moves from physical to virtual encounters between healthcare professionals and patients What are the consequences for patients when they are expected to do things that used to be done by healthcare professionals What actually happens when homes become electronically wired to healthcare organizations These are urgent questions that are however largely absent in dominant discourses on telecare Drawing on insights from science technology and human geography this work opens up novel accounts of the adoption and use of new technologies in healthcare Nelly Oudshoorn shows how telecare technologies participate in redefining the responsibilities and identities of patients and healthcare professionals introducing a new category of healthcare workers and changing the kinds of care and spaces where healthcare is situated This book intervenes critically into discourses that celebrate the independence of place and time by showing how places and physical contacts still matter in care at a distance

Low-skill Employment and the Changing Economy in Rural America Robert Martin Gibbs, 2005

American Farming Culture and the History of Technology Joshua T. Brinkman, 2024-05-06 Presenting a history of agriculture in the American Corn Belt this book argues that modernization occurred not only for economic reasons but also because of how farmers use technology as a part of their identity and culture Histories of agriculture often fail to give agency to farmers in bringing about change and ignore how people embed technology with social meaning This book however shows how farmers use technology to express their identities in unspoken ways and provides a framework for bridging the current rural urban divide by presenting a fresh perspective on rural cultural practices Focusing on German and Jeffersonian farmers in the 18th century and Corn Belt producers in the 1920s the Cold War and the recent period of globalization this book traces how farmers formed their own versions of rural modernity Rural people use technology to contest urban modernity and debunk yokel stereotypes and women specifically employed technology to resist urban gender conceptions This book shows how this performance of rural identity through technological use impacts a variety of current policy issues and business interests surrounding contemporary agriculture from the controversy over genetically modified organisms and hog confinement facilities to the growth of wind energy and precision technologies Inspired by the author's own experience on his family's farm this book provides a novel and important approach to understanding how farmers culture has changed over time and why machinery is such a potent part of their identity This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of agricultural history technology and policy rural studies the history of science and technology and the history of farming culture in the USA

University of Nebraska at Omaha How Users Matter Nelly Oudshoorn, Trevor Pinch, 2005-08-12 Users have become an integral part of technology studies The essays in this volume look at the creative capacity of users to shape technology in all phases from design to implementation Using a variety of theoretical approaches including a feminist focus on users and use in place of the traditional emphasis on men and machines concepts from semiotics and the cultural studies view of consumption as a cultural activity these essays examine what users do with technology and in turn what technology does to users The contributors consider how users consume modify domesticate design reconfigure and resist technological development and how users are defined and transformed by technology The essays in part I show that resistance to and non use of a technology can be a crucial factor in the eventual modification and improvement of that technology examples considered include the introduction of the telephone into rural America and the influence of non users of the Internet The essays in part II look at advocacy groups and the many kinds of users they represent particularly in the context of health care and clinical testing The essays in part III examine the role of users in different phases of the design testing and selling of technology Included here is an enlightening account of one company s design process for men s and women s shavers which resulted in a Ladyshave for users assumed to be technophobes Taken together the essays in How Users Matter show that any understanding of users must take into consideration the multiplicity of roles they play and that the conventional distinction between users and producers is largely artificial
