Sergio Della Sala, Mike Anderson,2012-04-05 In the past ten years there has been growing interest in applying our knowledge of the human brain to the field of education including reading learning language and mathematics This has resulted in the development of a number of new practices in education some good some bad and some just crazy Hence we have had theories suggesting that listening to Mozart can boost intelligence foot massages can help unruly pupils fish oil can boost brain power even the idea that breathing through your left nostril can enhance creativity Sadly there is a gap between what neuroscientists or cognitive psychologists know about brain mind functions and the supposedly scientific theory underlying the practices used daily in our schools So what has caused this wholesale embrace of neuroscience in the classroom a well intentioned but naive misunderstanding of how science works ideological reasons or financial incentives Neuroscience in Education brings together an international group of leading psychologists neuroscientists and geneticists to critically review some of these new developments examining the science behind these practices the validity of the theories on which they are based and whether they work It will be fascinating reading for anyone involved in education including psychologists teachers and policy makers

Reconceptualising Information Processing for Education Geoff Woolcott,2020-08-03 This book presents a novel conceptualisation of universal information processing systems based on studies of environmental interaction in both biological and non biological systems This conceptualisation is used to demonstrate how a single overarching framework can be applied to the investigation of human learning and memory by considering matter and energy pathways and their connections In taking a stance based on everyday interactions as well as on scientific practices the conceptualisation is used to consider educational theories and practices exemplified by the widely cited cognitive load theory In linking these theories and practices more closely to scientific thinking the book embraces an holistic approach to informational interactions not limited to conceptualisations of pattern signal or meaning The book offers educational researchers and educators an opportunity to re think their approach to instruction to take all facets of student learning environments into account in increasing human knowledge skills and experiences across society
