Speech Perception Production:

Speech Perception, Production and Linguistic Structure Yoh'ichi Tohkura, Eric Vatikiotis-Bateson, Yoshinori Sagisaka, 1992 Speech Production and Perception Mark Tatham, Katherine Morton, 2016-01-13 This book aims to develop a framework for a fully explanatory theory of speech production and speech perception It emphasises the difference between static models primarily descriptive and dynamic models that attempt to show how the basic linguistics and phonetics are related in an actual human speaker listener Perception and Production of Fluent Speech Ronald A. Cole, 2016-07-28 Originally published in 1980 this title looks at the mental processes involved in producing and understanding spoken language Although there had been several edited volumes on speech in the previous ten years this volume was unique in that it deals exclusively with perception and production of fluent speech The chapters in this volume contributed to by distinguished scientists from psychology linguistics and computer science deal with such questions as How are ideas encoded into sound How does a speaker plan an utterance How are words recognized What is the role of knowledge in speech perception In short how do people communicate with each other using speech Speech Physiology, Speech Perception, and Acoustic Phonetics Philip Lieberman, Sheila Blumstein, 1988-02-04 This analysis of speech ranges from clarifying physiological biological and neurological bases of speech through defining the principles of electrical and computer models of speech production Guide to Speech Production and Perception Mark Tatham, 2011-04-22 What roles do the speaker and the listener play in communication processes Providing an overall system view this innovative textbook explains how those working in the area think about speech Emphasising contextual and environmental perspectives Tatham and Morton lead you through classical and modern phonetics alongside discussion of cognitive and biological aspects of speech In explaining speech production for perception and the relationship between phonology and phonetics this book shows the possible applications such as language teaching clinical practice and speech technology and how these are relevant to other disciplines including sociolinguistics cognitive neuroscience psychology and speech acoustics The Initiation of Sound Change Maria-Josep Solé, Daniel Recasens, 2012-07-18 The origins of sound change is one of the oldest and most challenging questions in the study of language The goal of this volume is to examine current approaches to sound change from a variety of theoretical and methodological perspectives including articulatory variation and modeling speech perception mechanisms and neurobiological processes geographical and social variation and diachronic phonology This diversity of perspectives contributes to a fruitful cross fertilization across disciplines and represents an attempt to formulate converging ideas on the factors that lead to sound change This book is addressed to scholars in historical linguistics linguistic typology and phonology as well as to researchers in speech production and perception cognition and modeling Given the theoretical and methodological interest of the contributions as well as the novel instrumental techniques applied to the study of sound change this volume will interest professionals teaching language typology laboratory phonology sound change phonetics and topics this book appeals to not only scholars and students who study speech perception in preverbal infants and in children and adults learning Chinese but also to teachers with interests in pedagogical applications in teaching Chinese as Second Language Modularity and the Motor Theory of Speech Perception Alvin Meyer Liberman, 1991 First Published in 1990 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company What is the relation between speech production and speech perception? ROBERT J. PORTER, 1984 The Handbook of Speech Production Melissa A. Redford, 2019-02-12 The Handbook of Speech Production is the first reference work to provide an overview of this burgeoning area of study Twenty four chapters written by an international team of authors examine issues in speech planning motor control the physical aspects of speech production and external factors that impact speech production Contributions bring together behavioral clinical computational developmental and neuropsychological perspectives on speech production to create a rich and truly interdisciplinary resource Offers a novel and timely contribution to the literature and showcases a broad spectrum of research in speech production methodological advances and modeling Coverage of planning motor control articulatory coordination the speech mechanism and the effect of language on production processes RELATIONSHIPS AMONG INDIVIDUAL Jinghua Ou, 2017-01-26 This dissertation Relationships Among Individual Differences in Speech Perception Speech Production and Cognitive Functions a Case Study of Cantonese Tone Merger by Jinghua Ou was obtained from The University of Hong Kong Pokfulam Hong Kong and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons Attribution 3 0 Hong Kong License The content of this dissertation has not been altered in any way We have altered the formatting in order to facilitate the ease of printing and reading of the dissertation All rights not granted by the above license are retained by the author Abstract Studies of speech processing have generally made the implicit assumption that typically developed speakers can distinguish all sounds of their mother tongue in perception and production As such individual differences in speech processing is usually studied with speakers differing in training experience Strait Kraus 2011 or populations with developmental disorders Facchetti et al 2010 and few investigations have been conducted without the effects from training experience among typically developed individuals However sociolinguists have long recognized that native speakers vary in their ability to discriminate speech sounds in their language and enormous variability exists especially during a sound change in progress Taking the opportunity of an on going tone merging in Hong Kong Cantonese this thesis aims to systematically investigate individual differences of native speech perception production and their relationships with cognitive functions among typically developed speakers Three participant groups were recruited who presented respectively the pattern of good perception and good production of all Cantonese tones Per Pro that of good perception of all tones but poor production of specifically the T2 T5 distinction Per Pro and that of poor perception and production of specifically the T2 T5 distinction Per Pro Behavioral and neural measures of tone perception included reaction time discrimination sensitivity index and components of event related potentials ERPs the mismatch negativity MMN P3a and rise time of amplitude envelope Acoustic measurements were used to evaluate tone production in terms of both pitch and amplitude rise time. Components of attention and working memory in auditory and visual modalities are assessed with published cognitive test batteries. The results show that apart from the expected differences in accuracy and discrimination sensitivity of tone perception, both Per Pro and Per Pro took significantly longer to discriminate between tones than Per Pro. As for the performance in production, besides the differences in pitch offset, both Per Pro and Per Pro showed decreased differentiation in rise time between the two rising tones in production compared with Per Pro. With respect to the brain responses reflected in the MMN and P3a to pitch deviations among tones, Per Pro showed smaller and slower responses than one or both of the other two groups, but Per Pro and Per Pro did not differ from each other. However, both Per Pro and Per Pro showed weaker neural responses compared with Per Pro to the rise time of T5. In addition, Per Pro was poorer in tasks pertaining to the ability of attention switching/shifting regardless of modality than one or both of the other two groups, but Per Pro and Per Pro did not differ from each other. Further correlation and regression analyses reveal that both pitch contour height and rise time contributed to distinctive perception and production of rising tones. Measures of perception (behavioral and neural) and production were correlated with each other, and attentional shifting in visual and auditory modalities significantly predicted performances of discrimination and production. Taken together, the findings of the present study suggest that attentional switching
