Moscow Dmz Glenn E. Schweitzer, As the Soviet Union was collapsing in late 1991 reports began to reach the West about agents shopping for weapons systems and weapons scientists in the beleaguered Soviet military industrial complex In response the United States the European Community and Japan in cooperation with the Russian government created a program to reemploy Soviet scientific personnel in civilian projects dealing with the legacy of the Soviet system a polluted environment unsafe nuclear power facilities and economic underdevelopment In this fascinating first person account the American environmental scientist who led the effort to establish the International Science and Technology Center in Moscow tells the diplomatic scientific and human story behind a remarkable post Cold War conversion initiative      Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications , 1992      World Military Expenditures and Arms Transfers , 2002      World Military Expenditures and Arms Transfers, 1998 , 2000-08-17 NOTE NO FURTHER DISCOUNT FOR THIS PRINT PRODUCT OVERSTOCK SALE Significantly reduced list price while supplies last This 27th issue of World Military Expenditures and Arms Transfers WMEAT is published by the Department of State following its merger with the previous publisher the former U S Arms Control and Disarmament Agency The report covers 1987 to 1997 from the final years of the Berlin Wall through eight succeeding years Thus it depicts the transition from the Cold War in statistical terms The report shows that military spending in developing countries has been increasing since 1995 while that in developed countries may have reached the end of its decline Arms imports of both groups have been increasing since 1994 and particularly in the last year While armed forces continued to contract in the developed group those of the developing group appear to have stabilized Regional data reveal some arresting trends including sharp advances in military spending and arms imports in East Asia South America and North Africa The individual countries causing the trends are of course shown in the data Indicators of military burden such as the ratio of military spending to GNP appear to have generally leveled and reached the bottom of their post Cold War decline They may be poised to rise again and even the present levels are too high in many places in the developing world The report shows that the work of arms control non proliferation and disarmament cannot be relaxed and indeed greater efforts are needed now and in the future
