

The Tula Fermentation plant

FERMENTATION OF TOBACCO

Until quite recently the fermentation of tobacco in all countries producing tobacco of the Eastern type was, and still is in most of them, based on rough empirical data, without due considerations to, or a study of, the complicated processes which take place in the tobacco during the period of ripening in the field and the subsequent technological processing.

Although the essence of the processes of fermentation of tobacco has always interested scientists, tobacco experts and technologists of many countries, this problem remained unsolved for a long time.

Soviet scientists not merely made a study of ferments but learned to control their action and thus to change at will the technologically important properties of tobacco.

A profound knowledge of the processes of fermentation made it possible to make more extensive use of the ferments acting in the raw material being processed. On the basis of this knowledge Soviet technologists have worked out practical methods of controlling fermentation processes.

The Soviet scientists, Academicians A. I. Smirnov and his collaborators, who studied the changes in the composition of tobacco during the processes of curing, drying and fermentation, established on the basis of Academician A. N. Bach's data that the basic constituents of tobacco nicotine, pectines, essential oils, gum, etc.) undergo during fermentation quantitative and qualitative changes affecting the smoking qualities and technological properties of the finished product.
