Space Talk:

The Geometries of Visual Space Mark Wagner, 2012-11-12 When most people think of space they think of physical space. However, visual space concerns space as consciously experienced and it is studied through subjective measures such as asking people to use numbers to estimate perceived distances, areas, angles, or volumes. This book explores the mismatch between perception and physical reality and describes the many factors that influence the perception of space, including the meaning assigned to geometric concepts like distance, the judgment methods used to report the experience, the presence or absence of cues to depth, and the orientation of a stimulus with respect to point of view. The main theme of the text is that no single geometry describes visual space, but that the geometry of visual space depends upon the stimulus conditions and mental shifts in the subjective meaning of size and distance. In addition, The Geometries of Visual Space contains philosophical, mathematical, and psychophysical background material, looks at synthetic approaches to space perception, including work on hyperbolic, spherical, and Euclidean geometries, presents a meta-analysis of studies that ask observers to directly estimate size, distance, area, angle, and volume, looks at the size constancy literature in which observers are asked to adjust a comparison stimulus to match a variety of standards at different distances, and discusses research that takes a multi-dimensional approach toward studying visual space and discusses how spatial experience is influenced by memory. While this book is primarily intended for scholars in perception, mathematical psychology, and psychophysics, it will also be accessible to a wider audience since it is written at a readable level. It will make a good graduate-level textbook on space perception.

Toward a Directionalist Theory of Space H. Scott Hestevold, 2020-07-02 In Toward a Directionalist Theory of Space, On Going Nowhere, H. Scott Hestevold formulates a new relationalist theory of space by appealing to the view that the universe is directioned in the sense that there exist directional relations, a class of spatial relations that Leibniz overlooked. Extending the directionalist relationalist theory of space to the problem of when it is that discrete objects compose a whole, Hestevold revisits his answer to the Special Composition Question. He also uses the directionalist relationalist theory to formulate reductivist theories of boundaries and holes, theories that may allow one to resist the view that boundaries and holes are ontologically parasitic entities. Finally, he explores directionalism, relationalism, vis-à-vis spacetime. After noting findings of modern physics that favor substantivalist spacetime and then developing metaphysical concerns that favor instead directionalist relationalist spacetime, Hestevold notes the ontological benefit of endorsing spatiotemporal directional relations, even if spacetime substantivalism is the winning theory.

Blackness in Britain Kehinde Andrews, Lisa Amanda Palmer, 2016-04-28 Black Studies is a hugely important and yet undervalued academic field of enquiry that is marked by its disciplinary absence and omission from academic curricula in Britain. There is a long and rich history of research on Blackness and Black populations in Britain. However, Blackness in Britain has too often been framed through the lens of racialised deficits constructed as both marginal and pathological. Blackness in Britain attends to and grapples with the absence of Black Studies in Britain and the parallel crisis of Black marginality in British society It begins to map the field of Black Studies scholarship from a British context by collating new and established voices from scholars writing about Blackness in Britain Split into five parts it examines Black studies and the challenge of the Black British intellectual Revolution resistance and state violence Blackness and belonging exclusion and inequality in education experiences of Black women and the gendering of Blackness in Britain This interdisciplinary collection represents a landmark in building Black Studies in British academia presenting key debates about Black experiences in relation to Britain Black Europe and the wider Black diaspora With contributions from across various disciplines including sociology human geography medical sociology cultural studies education studies post colonial English literature history and criminology the book will be essential reading for scholars and students of the multi and inter disciplinary area of Black Studies Airman ,1959 Advanced Data
