Pincetl, 2003-03-10 In Transforming California Stephanie Pincetl argues that the transformation of nature in order to enhance economic development lies at the heart of much of the state's recent history. She sees late twentieth century California on a path of continued environmental degradation gripped by cynicism about government. Transforming California describes the evolution of the state's institutions of government as they apply to land use and development and it shows how land use decisions affect people's quality of life and their daily interactions with each other and with their environment. Pincetl offers an alternative vision for the renewal of the democratic spirit and process in California and for a reconciliation with nature.      The Mexican Frontier, 1821-1846 David J. Weber, 1982-06 Reinterprets borderlands history from the Mexican perspective      California Ranchos, Second Edition Burgess McK Shumway, 2006-12-01 California Ranchos is a thorough reworking of a 1942 WPA project listing the land grants issued during the Spanish and Mexican periods of California history. Entries include rancho name, record number, present day county, area of grant, grant date, recipient's acreage, new patent date, new recipients' names and location. Entries are arranged by county and rancho name. Several comprehensive indexes make the material completely accessible. The first place to go for research into California land holdings.      Brief in Behalf of the State of California on the Question Whether a Spanish Or Mexican Land Grant which Has Been Confirmed by a United States Patent and which is Described as Bounded on One Side "by the Sea" Extends to the Line of Mean High Tide, 1946*      Spanish and Mexican Land Grants Carlos E. Cortes, 1974      De-evolution Daniel T. Curry, 2021 Abstract The standard narrative of Spanish and Mexican land grants in California and New Mexico concludes that after the Mexican American War the U.S. federal government deliberately consistently and systematically dispossessed non-Anglo land grant claimants in an inherently corrupt and racist process. This dissertation complicates this narrative through an analysis of judicial and economic outcomes for Anglo-Hispanic and Pueblo land grant claimants and a case study analysis of selected individual and communal ejido land grants. Also a discussion of trans-national connections between the U.S. and Mexico regarding land grant legislation and the influence of anti-corporate utilitarian thought on liberal legal philosophy provides important context. This dissertation explores the importance of timing on the judicial and economic success of land grant claimants in California and New Mexico. Placing events and outcomes concerning land grants into three separate eras between 1850 and 1925 reveals an evolving judicial philosophy that explains significant differences in the success of land grant claimants in each period. The first era takes place between 1850 and 1877. During this period the success or failure of land grant claims were based on the validity of legal contracts between the grantee and the Spanish or Mexican government. Local Mexican custom perceived intent of the Mexican government when issuing land grants and oral testimony. Hispanic Anglo and Pueblo land grant claimants whose land grants were adjudicated during this period were generally successful in receiving confirmations to their claims and generally achieved long term economic success. The second era takes place between 1877 and 1897. During this period the success or failure of land grant claims were based on the validity of legal contracts between the grantee and the Spanish or Mexican government and a strict interpretation of the terms of the grant. While confirmations were more difficult to obtain during this period, contract supremacy remained central to court rulings. This was a period of transition as a more complex version of white supremacy, anti corporate ideology and anti monopolist ideology were adopted at the local state and federal levels of government. All three sentiments favored the rejection of remaining Spanish and Mexican land grant claims. However the federal judiciary continued to protect the property rights of Anglo Hispanic and Pueblo individuals and communities by minimizing the impact of increasingly racist and anti corporate state and federal legislation. The third era takes place between 1897 and 1925. During this period the U S federal court adjudication of land grants was increasingly influenced by anti corporate utilitarianism. This led to the rejection of both individual and communal ejido land grant claims that disproportionately disadvantaged Hispanic land grant claimants. After 1897 U S federal courts also no longer provided legal protection from state and local level regulation that specifically targeted multiple minority groups attempting to achieve economic success through land ownership. Historical Atlas of the American West Warren A. Beck, 1989. The 78 maps in this atlas add significant information to the study of the development of the American West. Defined for this resource as those 17 continental states west of the Missouri River. The maps range in chronology from explorations in the sixteenth century to the location of World War II prisoner of war and Japanese internment camps. The atlas includes maps of geographic flora and fauna data. Maps are on the left pages and narratives about the maps are on the facing pages. Maps are black and white, clear and easily read. An Appendix shows Spanish Mexican land grants and there is an index. This is an excellent atlas for both middle and high schools. Includes a section on Arkansas aboriginal setting and Native American tribes. Describes European contacts and settlements.

Federal Justice in California Christian G. Fritz, 1991-01-01. For forty years Ogden Hoffman presided over the federal district court for the Northern District of California, disposing of more than nineteen thousand cases brought before him. Federal Justice in California: The Court of Ogden Hoffman, 1851-1891 considers a career remarkable for longevity and productivity and at the same time examines the operation of a federal trial court in nineteenth century America. The cases adjudicated their significance and the court's impact upon the community. Solidly researched, Christian G. Fritz's book is unique in attending to the law on the level at which it was most often encountered by participants in legal actions.

During his four decades on the bench from the time of the California gold rush to the anti Chinese movement of the 1880s Hoffman dealt one on one with a cross section of humanity through his court came sea captains seamen seeking their wages wealthy steamship owners and distraught and injured passengers and Chinese immigrants Fritz shows him adjudicating land grant conflicts and bankruptcy cases and presiding over the admiralty criminal and common law and equity dockets The author has examined thousands of Hoffman s cases to gain insight into how nineteenth century federal trial courts were used by whom and with what effect The successful use that a broad range of plaintiffs made of Hoffman s court requires a re examination of theories suggesting that law of the period primarily developed and courts largely operated in ways that promoted commercial and entrepreneurial interest Just as important Fritz s sensitive analysis of an institution never loses sight of the proud life long bachelor native New Yorker and scion of a distinguished family who always identified himself with his court Christian G Fritz is a professor of law at the University of New Mexico
