Kansas State Historical Society, 1881 Index and Finding List of Serials Published in the British Isles, 1789-1832 William S. Ward, 2014-07-15 Growth of interest in the periodical literature of the past has emphasized increasingly the need for specialized hand lists a need which the American Union List of Serials the British Union Catalogue of the Periodical Publications in the University Libraries of the British Isles and other existing indexes cannot answer To satisfy one area of this need William S Ward has compiled a near definitive index and finding list of periodicals and newspapers of the English Romantic period In it are reflected the holdings of almost eleven hundred American Canadian and British libraries and newspaper offices The volume is also the first to list titles and library locations of all the newspapers magazines and other serials published in the British Isles during the years between the French Revolution and the Great Reform Bill The Financial Review of Reviews, 1910 History of the Genesee Country (western New York) Lockwood Richard

Doty, 1925 Steam-Ships: The Story of Their Development to the Present Day R. A. Fletcher, 2020-09-28 A hundred years ago it was impossible to forecast with any accuracy how long a journey might take to accomplish and the traveller by land or sea was liable to moving accidents by flood and field but side by side with the growth of the steam ship and the accompanying increase of certainty in the times of departure and arrival came the introduction of the railway system inland. Between the two however there is the fundamental difference that the sea is a highway open to all while the land must be bought or hired of its owners and the result of this was that inland transportation implying a huge initial outlay on railroad construction became the business of wealthy companies whereas any man was free to build a steamboat and ply it where he would. The shipowner moreover has a further advantage in his freedom to choose his route because he is at liberty to follow trade but if as has happened before now the traffic of a town decreases owing to a change in or the disappearance of its manufactures the railway that serves it becomes proportionately useless. In another essential the development of steam transport on land and sea provides a more striking contrast. The main features of George Stephenson's Rocket showed in 1830 in however crude a form as regards detail and design the leading principles of the modern locomotive engine and boiler but the history of the marine engine as of the steam ship which it propels has been one of radical change. The earliest attempts were made naturally enough in the face of great opposition. Every one will remember Stephenson's famous retort when it was suggested to him that it would be awkward for his engine if a cow got across the rails that it would be very awkward for the cow and at sea it was the rule for a long while to regard steam merely as auxiliary to sails to be used in calms. While ships were still built of wood and while the early engines consumed a great deal of fuel in proportion to the distance covered it was impossible to carry enough coal for long voyages and a large sail area had still to be provided. Progress was thus retarded until in 1843 the great engineer Brunel proved by the Great Britain that the day of the wooden ship had passed and the next ten years were marked by the substitution of iron for wood in shipbuilding. Thenceforward the story of the steam ship progressed decade by decade. Between 1855 and 1865 paddle wheels gave place to screw propellers and the need for engines of a higher speed which the adoption of the screw brought about distinguished the following decade as that in which the compound engine was evolved. Put shortly compounding means the using of the waste steam from one cylinder to do further work in a second cylinder. The extension of this system to triple expansion whereby the exhaust steam is utilised in a third cylinder the introduction of twin screws and the substitution of steel for iron in hull construction were the chief innovations between 1875 and 1885. The last fifteen years of the century saw the tonnage of the world's shipping doubled and the main features of mechanical progress during that period were another step to quadruple expansion and the application of forced draught which gives a greater steam pressure without a corresponding increase in the size of the boilers. The first decade of the present century has been already devoted to the development of the turbine engine.
