Staff Studies For The World Economic Outlook August 1987 World Economic Financial Surveys:

Staff Studies for the World Econ Outlook, August 1987 International Monetary Fund, 1987-01-01 This paper reviews the long term growth performance of the major industrial countries and discusses some of the many factors that have been identified as possible sources of the marked slowdown in growth since the early 1970s According to the view of different demographic developments across countries it is useful to break the growth of output down into changes in labor input and changes in labor productivity in order to obtain a basis for cross country comparisons Wage behavior in the face of energy price shocks appears to have differed considerably among the major industrial countries Increased uncertainty reflecting in particular changes in the international economic environment and the stop go financial policies of several of the major countries during the 1970s and is frequently cited as a possible reason for the slowdown in growth mainly through its impact on private investment Views on the contribution of slower net capital accumulation to the deceleration in growth depend upon assessments of whether the efficiency of investment declined significantly after 1973 and on assumptions made about technological change and the embodiment of technical progress

1989 World Economic and Financial Surveys

International Monetary Fund, 1989-01-01 This paper summarizes major measures taken in the international exchange and trade systems in 1988 and developments in exchange arrangements and the evolution of exchange rates The exchange arrangements adopted by members since 1973 cover a broad spectrum of degrees of flexibility from single currency pegs to a freely floating system Most countries have adopted arrangements that fall clearly into one or another of the major categories of the present classification system adopted by the IMF in 1982 and countries with dual markets usually have one market that is clearly more important than the other which allows accurate classification by major market Changes in IMF members arrangements for their currencies during this decade have shown a distinct tendency to move toward more flexible arrangements and away from single currency pegs continuing a trend that began in the mid 1970s A qualitative sense of the significance of the trend toward more flexible arrangements can be conveyed by the degree that world trade is affected by countries adopting different arrangements

World Economic and Financial Surveys International Monetary Fund, 1989-01-01 This paper describes the functioning of labor markets and to eliminate other structural obstacles to noninflationary growth The decline in the price level in the home country will involve a rise in the real money supply and if output is sluggish this will result in an excess supply of money This in turn will lead to a drop in the domestic interest rate and given foreign interest rates to a temporary depreciation of the exchange rate Structural measures could also affect investment and the current account by raising the rate of return on capital in the home country If capital is internationally mobile a higher rate of return on capital would result in a rise in investment and a temporary deterioration in the home country s current account which will be financed by an inflow of foreign capital The quantitative impact of financial market deregulation on the economy is rather uncertain

World Economic and Financial Surveys, Primary Commodities,

1989 International Monetary Fund,1989-01-01 This paper provides an analysis of the market developments in 1988 with respect to primary commodities and the outlook for these commodities in the near and medium term Attention is focused on the major nonfuel primary commodities traded in international markets Movements in the overall price index and in price indices for the major groups of commodities have been mirrored by an inverse movement in stocks of commodities Beginning of year stocks of all nonfuel commodities measured in terms of months of consumption increased during the first half of the 1980s and peaked in 1986 Movements in primary commodity prices convey important information in several ways they signal changes in the major source of export earnings for most developing countries they indicate changes in a significant component of the cost of producing many manufactured goods and they may be a helpful leading indicator of changes in inflation in industrial countries The negotiating groups established for the Uruguay Round met on a number of occasions throughout the year to discuss a wide range of issues World Economic and Financial Surveys, Primary Commodities,

1988 International Monetary Fund,1988-01-01 This paper provides an analysis of recent developments relating to the major nonfuel primary commodities traded in international markets Particular attention is given to market price movements and the factors underlying these movements A number of adjustments in the international trading environment in which commodity prices are determined occurred in 1987 and even more significant changes are expected in the years ahead Some of the adjustments in the past year affected only bilateral trading arrangements while others such as certain initiatives undertaken in the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade GATT negotiations and those relating to some international commodity agreements were of a multilateral nature The present round the eighth in a series of GATT negotiations held since 1947 involves two elements that are of particular relevance to international trade in commodities Although only small changes were made in 1987 in the various multilateral schemes that exist to compensate countries for export earnings shortfalls a significant increase in such financing in 1987 had the effect of stabilizing many developing countries export earnings thereby maintaining their capacity to import and buoying world trade World Economic and Financial Surveys, 1987 International Monetary Fund,1987-01-01 This paper provides an assessment of trends in the international capital markets including most notably recent market shocks to the financial system and developments in the debt situation It also reviews the scope of progress achieved over the last few years in strengthening the financial system Given the extensive changes that have taken place in domestic and international financial markets the authorities in all industrial countries have begun to adapt their supervisory and regulatory framework to reflect better the new financial environment These efforts acquired added importance with the recent financial market shocks The outlook for lending to developing countries that have experienced payments difficulties has deteriorated during the past year For most of these countries the prospect for a resumption of spontaneous general purpose bank lending appears very limited In gauging the vulnerability of the financial system it should be borne in mind that adverse economic circumstances affecting sovereign loans could have a simultaneous negative impact on domestic credit quality In some countries bank exposures to energy agriculture real estate shipping and elements of heavy industry remain problematic World Economic and Financial Surveys, 1988 International Monetary Fund,1988-01-01 This paper examines the World Economic Outlook forecasting record for the principal performance indicators for the major industrial countries and corresponding aggregates and for groups of non oil developing countries Several criteria were used in evaluating the forecasts the computation and evaluation of various summary statistics of forecast accuracy bias and efficiency comparisons with alternative forecasts naive forecasts and forecasts produced by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development OECD and by national forecasting agencies the examination of turning point errors and forecast performance in defined episodes and finally some attempt to explain forecast error in terms of unanticipated developments in policy variables and oil prices In judging the forecast performance of the World Economic Outlook a number of points must be kept in mind Most important it has to be recognized that the period since the inception of the World Economic Outlook as a regular forecasting exercise has been extraordinarily rich in economic upheavals which have made the odds against accurate forecasting formidable World Economic Outlook, October 1987 International Monetary Fund. Research Dept.,1987-01-01 This paper highlights that the first half of 1987 was characterized by considerable uncertainty about the world economic situation and prospects Following a disappointing growth performance in industrial countries in 1986 and deterioration in the external financial position of many developing countries signs of sluggishness in some indicators early in 1987 have given rise to concern that economic activity might weaken further in 1987 and next year Such fears have been aggravated by the persistence of historically large imbalances on current account and increasing trade frictions World Economic Outlook, October 1988 International Monetary Fund. Research Dept.,1988-01-01 This paper highlights that the performance of the world economy in the first half of 1988 has been considerably more satisfactory than was expected in the wake of the sharp stock market decline in October 1987 Output in industrial countries has grown strongly world trade has been robust and inflation appears to have remained under control Moreover the shifts in real trade flows induced by earlier exchange rate movements are at last beginning to have a visible effect on the payments imbalances of the three largest countries World Economic Outlook, April 1989 International Monetary Fund. Research Dept.,1989-01-01 This paper highlights that the world economic condition improved significantly during 1988 In industrial countries output growth strengthened markedly in an environment of moderate inflation World trade expanded at its fastest rate since 1984 which had important spillover effects on many developing countries particularly the exporters of manufactures significant progress was made in reducing external imbalances among the major industrial countries and the aggregate debt to exports ratio of developing countries was reduced At the same time several aspects of the current situation continue to demand the attention of policymakers
