Stalking The Wild Taboo:

Stalking the Wild Taboo Garrett Hardin, 1973 Stalking the Wild Taboo, 1973 Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, 1973-06 The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists is the premier public resource on scientific and technological developments that impact global security Founded by Manhattan Project Scientists the Bulletin's iconic Doomsday Clock stimulates solutions for a safer world Dare to Inquire Bruce I. Kodish, 2003 Beginning Again David Ehrenfeld, 1993 Early in this volume David Ehrenfeld describes what prophecy really is Referring to the biblical prophets he says they were not the holy fortunetellers that the word prophet has come to signify The business of prophecy is not simply foretelling the future rather it is describing the present with exceptional truthfulness and accuracy Once this is done then it can be seen that broad aspects of the future have suddenly become apparent The twentieth century is drawing to a chaotic close amidst portents of unprecedented change and upheaval The unravelling of societies and civilizations and the destruction of nature march together linked a fact whose enormous significance is often lost In Beginning Again David Ehrenfeld has undertaken the difficult task of describing the present clearly enough to reveal the future Out of his broad vision emerges a glimpse of a new millennium a vision at once frightening and comforting a scene of great devastation and great rebuilding Ehrenfeld ranges far and wide to present a coherent vision of our relationship with Nature its many aspects and implications as our century opens into the next millennium Whether he is writing about the problem of loyalty to organizations rights versus obligations our over managed society the vanishing of established knowledge the failure of experts the triumph of dandelions Dr Seuss Edward Teller or the future of farming he is always concerned with the intricate interaction between technology and nature As in his classic book The Arrogance of Humanism Ehrenfeld never loses sight of our fatal love affair with the fantasy of control We now have no choice he argues but to transform the dream of control of progress from one of overweening hubris love of consumption and the idiot's goal of perpetual growth to one based on the inventive imitation of nature with its honesty beauty resilience and durability Few American writers and even fewer scientists can describe these timeless transcendent qualities of nature so well In Places the opening chapter David Ehrenfeld tells about nightly vigils he spent alone on the moonlit beach of Tortuguero watching giant sea turtles emerging from the sea to lay their eggs in the black sand where they were born I could watch the perfect white spheres falling he writes Falling as they have fallen for a hundred million years with the same slow cadence always shielded from the rain or stars by the same massive bulk with the beaked head and the same large myopic eyes rimmed with crusts of sand washed out by tears Minutes and hours days and months dissolve into eons I am on an Oligocene beach an Eocene beach a Cretaceous beach the scene is the same It is night the turtles are coming back always back I hear a deep hiss of breath and catch a glint of wet shell as the continents slide and crash the oceans form and grow Human Ecology as Human Behavior John W. Bennett, 2017-07-05 Human interaction with the natural environment has a dual character By turning increasing quantities of natural substances into physical resources human beings might be said to have freed themselves from the constraints of low technology survival pressures. However the process has generated a new dependence on nature in the form of complex socionatural systems as Bennett calls them in which human society and behavior are so interlocked with the management of the environment that small changes in the systems can lead to disaster. Bennett's essays cover a wide range from the philosophy of environmentalism to the ecology of economic development from the human impact on semi arid lands to the ecology of Japanese forest management. This expanded paperback edition includes a new chapter on the role of anthropology in economic development. Bennett's essays exhibit an underlying pessimism if human behavior toward the physical environment is the distinctive cause of environmental abuse then reform of current management practices offers only temporary relief that is conservationism like democracy must be continually reaffirmed. Clearly presented and free of jargon Human Ecology as Human Behavior will be of interest to anthropologists economists and environmentalists.

Filters against Folly Garrett Hardin, 1986-06-03 For 20 years Garrett Hardin has been our most hardnosed thinker about ecological problems. Filters Against Folly makes provocative reading. Michael Crichton. The ecological problems facing our world present a forum for experts to offer slogans and solutions on all sides of the issue but leave most of us confused and unsure of the future. In this bracing book Garrett Hardin offers a plan for clear thinking about these dangers. He shows how the filters of literacy understanding what words really mean numeracy being able to quantify and interpret information and ecolacy assessment of complex interactions over time can allow anyone to make sensible judgments about ecological issues even in the face of a barrage of confusing expertise. Filters Against Folly offers an antidote to some of the more perverse and dangerous irrationalities of our time wishful self delusion educated incapacity and foolhardy optimism. If ever this book were needed it is needed today. Lynton K Caldwell School of Public Environmental Affairs Indiana University.

Transmedia Frictions Marsha Kinder, 2014-07-25 Editors Marsha Kinder and Tara McPherson present an authoritative collection of essays on the continuing debates over medium specificity and the politics of the digital arts. Comparing the term transmedia with transnational they show that the movement beyond specific media or nations does not invalidate those entities but makes us look more closely at the cultural specificity of each combination. In two parts the book stages debates across essays creating dialogues that give different narrative accounts of what is historically and ideologically at stake in medium specificity and digital politics. Each part includes a substantive introduction by one of the editors. Part 1 examines precursors contemporary theorists and artists who are protagonists in this discursive drama focusing on how the transmedia frictions and continuities between old and new forms can be read most productively. N Katherine Hayles and Lev Manovich redefine medium specificity. Edward Branigan and Yuri Tsivian explore nondigital precursors. Steve Anderson and Stephen Mamber assess contemporary archival histories and Grahame Weinbren and Caroline Bassett defend the open ended mobility of newly emergent media. In part 2 trios of essays address various ideologies of the digital. John Hess and Patricia R Zimmerman Herman Gray and David Wade Crane redraw contours of race space and the margins Eric Gordon Cristina Venegas and John T Caldwell unearth database cities portable homelands and virtual fieldwork and Mark B N Hansen Holly Willis and Rafael Lozano Hemmer and Guillermo G mez Pe a examine interactive bodies transformed by shock gender and color An invaluable reference work in the field of visual media studies Transmedia Frictions provides sound historical perspective on the social and political aspects of the interactive digital arts demonstrating that they are never neutral or innocent Wildlife and America ,1978 Controlling Environmental Pollution P. Aarne Vesilind, Thomas D. DiStefano, 2006 New introductory textbook designed for a one semester course in environmental technology Created to appeal to a range of students it combines lucid presentations of environmental technologies with fascinating stories and biographies illustrating milestones in environmental science and engineering
